Cheerful Tombstones
Coolidge on Those Debts
Money Irrigation
Socialists Try Banking

—By Arthur Brisbane—

IN THAT DISMAL CANYON called Wall Street stocks fell again yesterday, United States Steel to a new low price, 24.

The neat little white gravestones scattered around Trinity Church, that looks down Wall Street, were the most cheerful things in that neighborhood. With green grass and flowers around them, and the beautiful windows of the church in the background, they looked quite cheerful, as who should say, "We were not alive in 1929, we are not long or short of anything, and we are so happy."

In their surviving limousines, brokers go home through South st. and the Fish Market along the edge of the East river. Passing the James Slip Gospel Mission they read one sign, "Make sure your sin will find you out," and another sign, even bigger, "Where will you spend eternity?"

Some are wondering where they will spend next year.

Read Calvin Coolidge's article, "Settling the War Debts," published in the July number of COSMOPOLITAN MAGAZINE.

When England signed the agreement to pay what she owed, that was, Mr. Coolidge says, "a recommitment of the English-speaking world to the validity of the contract."

Reminding you that this country, which took Europe's notes, payable on demand, at 5 per cent interest, now gives Europe 62 years in which to pay at a low rate of interest. Calvin Coolidge opines that if this country in three years could send ten billion dollars to European friends, they should be able to return half of that amount in 62 years.

Those inclined to be sentimental about Europe's debts to us should read Calvin Coolidge's article.

If anything breaks loose in this country, which kind heaven forbid, gentlemen whose motto is, "Billions for high finance, but not a dollar for soldiers," may do some mournful regretting.

Since it is not possible to supply the men with jobs, with the national intelligence temporarily paralyzed, how can anybody deny that the next best thing would be to give the soldiers their bonus, which will have to be paid to them anyhow? What the country needs is not money in hundreds of millions put away in bank vaults, but money scattered all over the country as water is scattered in irrigating a ranch. The country needs money that will be SPENT, not accumulated.

Anyway, is it necessary for the government first to sell bonds to bankers, pay interest on the bonds, then take the money and give it to the soldiers? Why not print the money and give it to them direct? The only value that the money has is the name of the government on the bills.

Only a fool would talk about inflation, since this money would be spent in every corner of every state in the Union, absorbed like water applied to the roots of trees, grass and bushes, spent in retail stores everywhere.

We need to start business moving.

Would not the spending of two billions of dollars by three million men, all over the country, start everything moving? Wouldn't they buy shoes, hats and overcoats, pay their bills at grocery stores, pay something on account to keep from losing their homes, wouldn't they order many new automobiles?

This country is starving for money spent, just as a farm with no rainfall starves for water. But foolish minds that represent Uncle Sam think the way to end a drouth is to put water in reservoirs, and keep it there. They are wrong. The way to attend to a drouth is to scatter water.

THE WAY TO ATTEND TO A DEPRESSION IS TO SCATTER MONEY. We recently found a couple of billions of it for financial institutions, and, as Mr. Coolidge points out, we found ten billions of it quickly for foreign countries. Why would it wreck this country if now we found two billion, four hundred million for the soldiers to whom that money must be paid eventually anyhow?

Chile's Socialists have taken over the Central Bank of Santiago, established according to plans by Prof. Kemmerer, of Princeton University. The Socialists dismissed the board of directors, and took charge of the bank themselves. You may well exclaim, "OY"! Then they ordered taxes suspended in rural regions and instructed all school teachers to "direct education

GIRL MURDER KEY WITNESS REPORTED MISSING

Millie Hoyer Sought to Face Two Who Claim They Were on Fatal Party

The jig-sawed pieces of the fantastic "Jean Calloway" murder puzzle wouldn't fit today and police called on four women to put them together.

A number of missing pieces must be supplied before the whole completes the story of the life and death of the butterfly party girl who was born Mary Conley, betrayed as Mary Conley—and who worked out a vengeance against society under a half-dozen other names.

Betty Shea, 22, of School st., Watertown; Mrs. Lila Burgess, 34, of Emerald st., South End; Mrs. Margaret LaDoulis, 29, of Astor st., Back Bay, and Millie Hoyer, 30, of Decatur st., Charlestown, were the young women to whom police turned for the missing pieces of the puzzle.

Miss Hoyer, who first identified the victim as "Jean Calloway" and told of the North End beginning of the party that ended in the deliberate auto murder of the girl in Woburn, Tuesday morning, became again the most important figure in the case.

VANISHES AGAIN

It was she to whom police turned to clear up the conflicting stories of the last party—and she could not immediately be located. She wasn't at home and she wasn't at the home of a Charlestown friend, where she was originally found by police on the morning of the murder.

When she is found it is expected she will face Miss Shea and Mrs. Burges together and say which of them was with Miss Conley in the La Bella Cafe, from which the death ride started.

Both claim to have been. Mrs. Burgess, under arrest, says she was with the slain girl on the auto ride

Curley Pay Cuts to Aid Jobless Held Illegal

Mayor Curley's deduction of a day's pay from county and city employes for unemployment relief was declared illegal today by a jury in Suffolk court.

The jury awarded $19.89 to Francis A. Campbell, clerk of Suffolk Superior Civil Court, in what was considered a test case that will have a bearing on deductions from thousands of city and county employes.

Clerk Campbell sued for a day's pay, deducted in February, after he failed to gain anything in a written protest to Curley.

The award represented $18.89 for pay and $1 for interest.

JURY SAYS "NO" TWICE.

Campbell had maintained the mayor could not force the forfeiture of pay toward the fund and started the suit that ended yesterday with instruction to the jury for answers to two questions.

The questions, both of which were answered in the negative, were:

"Did the payroll sheet contain the following words and figures: 'Amount $566.66, unemployment relief fund $18.89, net amount $547.77' when the defendant signed the payroll?

"Did the payroll sheet contain the following words: "The unemployment relief fund deduction is made by the auditor of the County of Suffolk upon the order of the Mayor of the City of Boston' when the plaintiff signed the payroll?"

INSTRUCTED VERDICT

Judge James H. Sisk directed the verdict and announced to Asst. Corp. Counsel H. Murray Pakulski that his rights were reserved.

"If I am wrong in my decision the Supreme Court will say so," Judge Sisk said.

"I am of the opinion that the plaintiff should prevail in this case."

Pukulski made no immediate announcement that he intended to seek a ruling in the higher court.

The money has been forwarded to the proper parties in Washington.

In a letter with his dollar, "Veteran" says:

"Dear Editor: I am enclosing $1 to help supply smokes and eats for some of my buddies on the Washington Front. Only wish it could be more. I hope you will start a 'Buddy Fund' to give many of the boys who are working a chance to do something for their Buddies who are in need and camping on the door steps in Washington. Bonus Army Drives Out 200 Reds

VETS' RANKS SWELLED BY HUNDREDS

With the Bonus Army

1—200 avowed Reds are expelled from bonus army in war on Communism. Violence was prevented only by quick action by army officers.

2—Bonus army grows by hundreds, and alarm for health of veterans is added to fear of starvation. Thousands more are on the way from all over the country. Police estimated there are more than 10,000 there now.

4—Veterans work on permanent organization, determined to stay until their demands are granted.

5—Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, famous radio priest, donates $5000 to the veterans for food and other necessities. Several tons of food donated in other cities.

Washington, June 10—Irate veterans at the principal encampment of the bonus army last night served fresh notice that they would brook no Communistic influence by expelling some 200 avowed Reds.

The group kicked out of the squalid makeshift village of the veterans was made up mostly of newcomers from Cleveland, Detroit and New York. They were singled out late last night as the camp commanders questioned the arriving contingents which poured in steadily at the rate of about 100 an hour.

Fewer Congressmen, Less Waste in Mail, Urged by Mr. Hearst

[Reprinted from the San Francisco Examiner of June 10]

June 4, 1932.

Mr. Clarence R. Lindner,
General Manager, The Examiner,
San Francisco, Calif.

My Dear Mr. Lindner:

I HAVE your telegram. I agree with you. I think that in the interest of economy the loading up of the mails with thousands of pounds of congressional printed matter and padded Congressional Record promotion and all waste of that kind with which Congress extravagantly pampers itself should be eliminated.

I think, too, that we should save money in actual Congressmen. There is no greater waste of public money than hiring incompetent Congressmen with it.

There should be fewer and better Congressmen. One Congressman to every 500,000 inhabitants is enough.

This proportion would have many advantages. It would not only save the people's money, but it would reduce the number of irresponsibles in the House of Representatives.

It would make the Congressmen who were sent to Washington of more importance and of more consequence. Each one would represent a large district and a district with more varied interests. Therefore he would probably not be so narrow in his views.

FURTHERMORE, the greater importance of the district, resulting in the greater importance of the position of Congressman, would lead a better class of people to contest for the position, and heaven knows we need a better class.

On the whole the advantage would be great and a resolution to secure this benefit of fewer and better Congressmen should be introduced

LONDON POLICE GUARD VALERA

London, June 10 (INS)—Eamon De Valera, president of the Irish Free State executive council, went into conference with Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald shortly before noon today to resume the Anglo-Irish discussion begun earlier in the week in Dublin.

De Valera, although cheered by a crowd of more than 200 sympathizers as he passed through Whitehall on his way to the premier's home, wore a sober countenance. He refused to smile at the request of photographers who "shot" him as he went into No. 10 Downing st.

Downing st. was cleared by a large squad of special policemen and members of Scotland Yard who closely guarded the Irish executive. All strangers were kept at a great distance.

"SLIPPER GIRL" NEAR COLLAPSE

Near collapse as a result of the receipt of numerous anonymous poison pen letters, Miss Dorothy Covill, Lynn's Cinderella girl whose slipper was stolen by George Murphy, Saugus crooner, today appealed for police protection.

Deputy Chief of Police Edward D. Callahan announced he was ready to furnish a bodyguard for the girl, who lives at 7 Fosdick ter. Federal authorities have also been notified.

Murphy, who was found guilty of assault through having taken the girl's shoe off in Harwood st. is in Salem jail for lack of bonds having appealed.

In the last week Miss Covill has received a large number of "poison pen" missives.

At first they were thought to be the work of a boy, but today the girl was so near a collapse that police were called in. The letters are said to be all in the same handwriting.

SNYDER FAILS IN MAD DASH FROM JAIL

"I Wanted to Be Shot!" Cries Slayer Awaiting Doom in Electric Chair

Herman "Red" Snyder, awaiting sentence to the electric chair for the murder of James M. Kiley, made a spectacular dash from East Cambridge jail today, but was captured three minutes later in a cellar.

Leaping a wall amid a hail of shots, Snyder raced down Spring st., only to be run to earth and captured at gunpoint by Capt. Patrick Hurley and Sergt. John P. Donlon.

The escape and subsequent capture emptied the East Cambridge courthouse of attendants and spectators who heard the shots and rushed to the street.

SCARED BY GUNS

Snyder surrendered after Sergt. Donlon had fired one shot into the darkness of the Hurley st. cellar where he was hiding.

"Put it away," he panted. He was near exhaustion from running. "I'll come out." Then to Capt. Hurley the convicted murderer said:

"You can't blame me for trying to get away. After all, you know it was my life."

He was placed in an auto and surrounded by a group of police was rushed back to the jail and installed in a cell.

WANTED TO BE KILLED

To Deputy Sheriff Joseph McElroy, keeper of the jail, Snyder said:

"I just wanted to get shot, but the fellow missed me."

His recreation privileges were taken away and he was placed in a different section of the jail where added precaution can be taken.

The escape occurred when Snyder was exercising in the yard under the eyes of four jail officers. Other prisoners, including John A. Donnellon, found guilty with Snyder of the Kiley murder, and James T. Garrick awaiting trial for the same crime, were in their cells.

An electrician had left a ladder against the yard wall, and had gone into the jail machine shop to get tools. Sprinting 25 yards to the wall, Snyder scrambled up the ladder.

Officer Paul Olson, on duty in the yard, reached the ladder as Snyder went up and jerked it out from under him.

SPRINGS OVER WALL

The prisoner managed to seize the top of the wall, swung himself over and dropped into Spring st., as Officer Joseph Keough, also in the yard, fired two shots. Olson followed Snyder over the wall.

The jail yard is directly opposite the Third District Court, where Capt. Timothy Leahy, Capt. Hurley, Sergt. Donlon and other police were in attendance.

Hearing the shots all ran out of the courthouse. Captain Hurley and Sergeant Donlon were the first in the street and caught a fleeting glimpse of the escaped prisoner.

ANOTHER SHOT FIRED

Commandeering an automobile they gave chase, and saw Snyder dive into a cellar in Hurley st. With guns in hands they entered the cellar, and Donlon fired once.

Throughout his trial Snyder displayed a belligerent attitude, and on one occasion, while in the sheriff's office at recess, he attacked James E. Bowman, a witness who had identified his picture in a magazine.

The break for liberty occurred as Judge William H. McDonnell, counsel for Donnellon, was filing in Middlesex Superior Court an appeal from the verdict. Snyder's appeal has already been filed by Atty. Abraham C. Webber,

CURLEY WARNS WOMEN WILL NEXT INVADE CAPITAL

MAYOR SEES 5 BILLION PLAN AS ONLY CURE FOR CRISIS

Congress should stay in session until it authorizes the $5,000,000,000 federal prosperity loan for public works, Mayor Curley declared today.

The plan, the best yet devised to revive business and break the back of unemployment distress, has the overwhelming support of the American people, the mayor said.

Public works would open up jobs to war veterans, thousands of whom, in desperate straits, have trooped to Washington with the bonus army to demand assistance from Congress.

Speaking of the veterans Mayor Curley declared:

"When you find sane and intelligent men discussing revolt and considering it in the national Capital, it is time the government acted. The sooner the government acts the better for the country—and the action must come quickly.

WOMEN, CHILDREN NEXT

"If the government doesn't do something for the boys who are there now, Congress will have starving women and children at the next session."

All other relief programs pending in Congress are mere drops in the bucket, and, he added, real, permanent improvement can be speeded only if Congress courageously launches a colossal building program extending throughout the land.

Curley had no patience with the oft-expressed Washington fears about depressing the bond market or with the specter of America being forced off the gold standard if the government floated a loan to put people to work.

GREATER THAN GOLD

"We seem to be obsessed with the fear of going off the gold standard," he said. "There is something far more important today than the gold standard.

"It is the American people. We no longer must tolerate misery and suffering because millions of our people, though begging for work, can't find jobs."

He said the effect of the bond issue would be just the opposite of the result so frequently pictured in high places in the administration, in Congress and in financial circles.

Business wouldn't be further depressed, for the construction work would give business to business, and that, Curley said, is what the country needs. He added:

"In this emergency, the federal government must set the example on a colossal scale and fire the imagination of the people. It must convince the people that prosperity has not forsaken us. It must provide work. That's the only way the psychology of fear can be banished.

MEANS GENERAL BOOM

"The $5,000,000,000 prosperity loan would enable the government to undertake major building projects all over the country. Commerce, industry, business would respond at once. People now idle would go back to work.

"There would be a great demand for materials—steel, lumber, machinery, all the basic commodities. Factories would reopen to tudn out these materials.

"Not only would there be employment for those now without jobs, but business for the railroads, steamships, the construction industry, for a multitude of various industries would be provided.

"Starting up the wheels of industry would stimulate trade for retail establishments. Not a section of the country but would benefit in supplying the needs of the people who are at present unable to purchase commodities that are necessary to their welfare and happiness.

"It is inconceivable that Congress could adjourn without providing this essential relief."

HOOVER'S ANSWER

Curley was in Washington for two days with the delegations of mayors, which urged Congress and President Hoover to approve the Prosperity Loan.

The administration answered that the needs of the people could be provided for with the proposed $300,000,000 in loans to states through the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

Palliatives won't solve the problem, Curley retorted, adding:

"Many of us thought we knew what the actual conditions in the country were until we went to Detroit for the Mayors' Conference. We found there, based on first-hand information from mayors, that conditions were worse than many had believed.

"It is not enough to provide food for the hungry and the suffering.

"The people need jobs. The work can be provided through the prosperity bond issue."

WORK IS SOLUTION

Mayor Curley pointed out that Boston's experience demonstrates unanswerably the value of public works. This city, during the last three years, has been spending about $30,000,000 annually. The funds were borrowed. He declared:

"Based on Boston's ratio to the total population, the federal government would need to expend at least $4,500,000,000 throughout the country."

Irresistible demands from the people may force Congress to pass the prosperity loan, he said, explaining:

"The reason is obvious. The solution of our present trouble is work and wages."

Other Relief Plans Drop in Bucket

All unemployment relief except the $5,000,000,000 prosperity loan would be a mere "drop in the bucket," Mayor Curley said today in calling for Federal aid for the jobless.

If Congress doesn't soon do something for the veterans now in Washington, it will have starving women and children at its next session, he said.

Concerning the administration's alarm about going off its gold standard, the mayor declared the well-being of the American people was of more importance than financial policies.

FULLER SILENT ON 2D PLACE

Former Gov. Alvan T. Fuller maintained silence today with regard to the vice-presidential boom launched for him by George F. Booth, Massachusetts Republican delegate-at-large, in Worcester last night.

Booth, Worcester publisher, suggested that Vice-President Curtis be set aside by the Republicans in favor of a nominee from the Eastern seaboard and specifically suggested former Governor Fuller as the logical nominee, at a dinner tendered him by Worcester County Republicans.

"That's the first I have heard of it," was the only comment Fuller would make when he was informed of Booth's suggestion

He would not go any further into the situation and stated that Booth's suggestion was the first that had come to him.

Four years ago, when Hoover was nominated for President at Kansas City, Fuller was mentioned considerably as a Vice-Presidential candidate.

Sellout of Republican Convention Seats Near

Yankees to Organize Chinese Air Force

Nanking, China, June 10 (AP)—The national government has contracted with a group of American former military aviators to develop a Chinese air force, it was indicated in official circles today.

The plans were completed through Edward Howard, United States air attache at Shanghai, with the approval of the State Department at Washington.

Warsaw, N. C., June 10 (AP)—Henry L. Stevens, Jr., commander of the American Legion, left his home here for New York today and will sail for England tomorrow to invite the Prince of Wales to attend the Legion's convention in Portland, Ore.

The Problem

The Remedy

THE $5,000,000,000 National Prosperity Loan would put millions of men to work, supply them and their families with nourishing food and remove the irritations and worriments which now make them the prey of illnesses.

MEANS REVEALS ORDER TO GIVE UP MONEY

Former Sleuth Springs Surprise at Trial on Swindling Charge

Washington, June 10 (US)—Gaston B. Means, investigator extraordinary, played a trump card in his trial here.

Charged by Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean with having swindled her out of $104,000, as a supposed ransom and expense money for the return of the Lindbergh baby, Means, through counsel, put in evidence a surprise note.

It was signed by Mrs. McLean, and directed him to turn over the ransom money to a mysterious agent for the supposed kidnapers, known as the "Fox."

The note was written at Aiken, S. C., March 23, and read:

"This is your authorization to turn over to Neil Williams the $100,000 in your custody. (Signed) Evalyn Walsh McLean."

Williams previously had been identified as the "Fox" and as "No. 19" and, Mrs. McLean testified, was the one man Means said trusted him during the negotiations.

After introduction of the note, which came after Mrs. McLean testified she expected Means to turn the money over only to Father Hurney, a Catholic priest interested in the negotiations, defense Attorney J. Morris Wampler pressed her concerning a "knock-out powder."

She declared she told Means to use knock-out powders on the "Fox" instead of killing him as, she testified, Means suggested.

When she went to El Paso, Tex., in later stages of the Means negotiations, she took the powders with her in a fountain pen to protect herself from the suspected kidnapers who she knew "were dangerous men," she said.

Mrs. McLean also revealed yesterday that she asked Means to drop his negotiations with Col. Robert Guggenheim, a friend of Col. Lindbergh's.

WETS HAMMER AT HOOVER ON RUM PLANK

Warn President That Straddle Now Would Be Fatal to Party Success

Washington, June 10 (INS)—Exuberant wets today hammered at what they believed would be clinching wedges against any possible further resistance on the part of President Hoover to a definite stand on the prohibition question in the Republican platform.

"A straddle will be fatal," was the burden of their message to the White House.

One of the most politically important callers on Mr. Hoover's engagement list this morning was Charles Beecher Warren of Michigan, former ambassador to Mexico and Japan, and chairman of the resolutions committee for the Republican convention in 1924.

Warren had announced he would tell the President that "ideas contained in the Michigan prohibition plank should be incorporated in the national platform" to be adopted next week in Chicago.

The Michigan State Republican convention enacted a plank calling for submission of repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment to state conventions, with a preface which asserted the question was above partisan quibbling because of differences of opinion in the ranks of both parties.

The American voter has a sovereign right to settle such a matter at the polls, it was held.

Y. M. C. A. Leaders Join Drive Against Dry Law

New York, June 10 (INS)—A number of officials of the Young Men's Christian Association joined in the growing drive today against prohibition, following the statement in London of Dr. John R. Mott, president of the world's alliance of the Y. M. C. A., that he favored a referendum on the question.

Walter T. Diack, general secretary of the New York Y. M. C. A., and Elmer Galloway, secretary of the organization's Bowery branch, both favored a change. The former favored resubmission of the prohibition question to the people, while the latter advocated legalizing beer and light wines.

A dissent from Dr. Mott's views was voiced by Mrs. Frederick M. Paist, president of the national board of the Young Women's Christian Association, who said she opposed resubmission.

Glass Predicts Budget Will Be Billion Short

Richmond Va., June 10—Senator Carter Glass doubts that the budget will be balanced.

Reading from the state Democratic platform a denunciation of federal treasury estimates "so inconceivably, awry as to make intelligent revenue legislation impossible," he said:

Mrs. Paist Says Y. W. C. A. Wants Dry Law Retained

New York, June 10—Mrs. Frederic M. Paist, president of the national board of Y. W. C. A. expressed disagreement with the views of John R. Mott, president of the World's Alliance of the Y. M. C. A. and of the International Missionary Council, on the prohibition question.

Mott said in London Tuesday that he favored resubmission of the amendment to the people.

"In my judgment," Mrs. Paist said, "the great majority of the leaders of the Y. W. C. A. not only desire law observance and enforcement to include the 18th amendment but believe this possible of achievement."

Connally to Nominate Garner at Convention

Washington, June 10 — Senator Tom Connally of Texas will nominate John N. Garner for the presidency at the Democratic national convention.

When California is called that state will yield to Texas and Connally will make his nominating speech. When Texas is called the state will yield to California and William G. McAdoo will second Garner's nomination, promptly into Congress by some Congressman who thinks more of his country than he does of petty politics.

Connally has always been a strong backer of Garner for the presidency and his support is expected to bring the Speaker many votes.

A third improvement, though perhaps not an economy, would be to allow the populous States more Senators. Still we need not deprive the less populous States—even the least populous ones—of their present representation of two Senators.

The advantage of this modification of the Constitution would be greater representation in the Senate from the more important States,—from States which are more important not merely in population but in industry and in both producing and consuming power.

This would give the country a better balanced representation in the Senate. It would bring more intelligence to the support of the legitimate business of the country, and this is a business country.

IT would diminish the proportion and relative influence of the Populists and the Communists and would prevent them from destroying the prosperity of the country by visionary and ill-considered schemes based on ignorance of business conditions and of the industrial, financial and commercial development which creates prosperity,—and which in consequence largely creates, or at least extends, the consumption of the products of the farms and the mines.

Narrow and prejudiced views in Congress, vicious and vindictive measures, tend to injure the welfare of the whole country, and so of course to injure, indirectly and directly too, the best interests of the very farming States which some of these visionary radicals represent.

The government of this country should be built on true democracy and not on the principles of either plutocracy or populism.

The one thing to be avoided is the division of our country into narrow communistic groups, on the one hand, and selfish Fascistic groups on the other.

If this country is to remain the liberal democracy its founders desired it to be, it must have more intelligent and more soundly patriotic representation in both the lower House of Congress and in the Senate.

Sincerely yours,
WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

W. R. Hearst,
Los Angeles, Calif.

I would like to contribute to the Boy Scout Congressman Symposium.

I should think a Boy Scout Congress could economize considerably in its own extravagances.

A lot of money could be saved that is now wasted by Congressmen in reckless abuse of their franking privileges, their right to send matter free through the mails, and in wasteful distribution of enormous quantities of Congressional Records containing congressional speeches which few people want to read.

Why could not Congress begin its economies at home, as it were, and cut out some of its own extravagances?

Coolidge Reaffirms Opposition to Cancellation of War Debts; Europe Has Absolutely No Claim on U. S., Says Ex-President

New York, June 10—An article by Calvin Coolidge, subject of a heated discussion in Congress, contains a reiteration of his stand, taken as President, against cancellation of war debts owed the United States by European powers. It appears in the July issue of Hearst's International-Cosmopolitan magazine, which appeared on the stands today.

Representative Emanuel Celler of New York precipitated the discussion when he informed the House that he understood that Coolidge, in the article, condemned prohibition. Later he corrected himself and said that he did not mean the July issue, but a future issue that would go to press in July.

DEBT PROBLEM ANALYZED

The article by Calvin Coolidge in the July issue contains no reference to prohibition, John Randolph Hearst, vice-president of the International Magazine Co., which publishes the magazine, stated today.

In the article Mr. Coolidge reduces what Europe described as the "debt problem" to this fundamental:

"The money we furnished we had to borrow. Someone must pay it. It cannot be cancelled. If we do not collect it from Europe we must collect it from our taxpayers."

CALVIN COOLIDGE

Mr. Coolidge's article, "Settling the war debts," is an anlysis by the man who sat in the White House while the European powers contracted their debt settlements with the United States.

REPARATIONS SEPARATE

His examination of the justice of these settlements is all the more timely in view of the conference of European powers at Lausanne next week. Here an attempt will be made to link war debt reductions with reparations, which Germany has indicated are ended.

Mr. Coolidge discloses the illegality and injustice of this view. He says:

"In all the discussion of the debts, one thing our government attempted to make clear was that we would in no way consent to their being involved with the question of reparations. The original notes given to secure the money and all subsequent agreements for settlement are the best evidence on this point. They are all unconditional stipulations to pay."

SUBSIDY TO EUROPE

The suggestion that cancellation would help American export trade is blasted. Mr. Coolidge states:

"In the first place, to remit the debts would be a direct subsidy of over a quarter of a billion dollars per year to the governments of foreign countries made for the assumed purpose of inducing their people to trade with our people.

"If we wanted to go into the subsidy business we could find concerns on our own soil and governments outside of Europe where we could make the operations much more profitable."

The cancellationist argument that America came late into the World War and should pay more since our losses were less, meets this rebuke from Mr. Coolidge:

"So far as we were concerned the war was not a common enterprise. The suggestion that we should make a large contribution to its cost because we came into it late is equivalent to saying we should pay a fine because we had not been one of the original disturbers of the peace of the world.

"If anyone wants to go into equity it will have to be decided that we were not the beneficiaries but the innocent victims of a war made by other nations. Instead of being bound to pay them we could make out a case for injuries which we have suffered."

Here at home, Bernarr McFadden, who owns an evening newspaper, and feels that union wages are too high, gives his workers a chance to buy the paper by cutting their wages 25 per cent and having them take stock in the paper to the amount of the 25 per cent cut. In 12 years, this will give the workers control of the stock and the paper, with the right to do exactly as they please with it.

That experiment will be as interesting as the experiment in Chile, and the results, perhaps, as surprising.

Every country, every enterprise needs A HEAD, somebody to run it. "Everybody in general" cannot run anything. That is why Providence put a brain in man's skull, and allows that brain to direct and control the hands, feet and all the rest of it.

It may seem unjust to the feet, but that is the only way to run it.

Another "very important man" abandoning prohibition in its present form is John R. Mott, world head of the Young Men's Christian Association. He ought to know, and says that results of prohibition have been deplorable.

In all these opinions nobody has anything much to say about individual rights.

Suppose well meaning individuals should announce, "Nobody shall drink tea. It contains a drug, bad for the health. Nobody shall drink coffee, caffeine is dangerous."

Tea drinkers and coffee drinkers would protest, saying, "Have we no rights?"

If a workman who wants a glass of beer asks, "Have I no rights?" everybody replies emphatically, "CERTAINLY, NOT."

FREED OF 'GYP' CHARGE

MAY DARLING MARION WHALER

OWNER OF 'GYP JOINT' JAILED

New York, June 10—A Federal jury convicted Louis Greenstein, alleged proprietor of a "sliding rate" cabaret, of maintaining a public nuisance in W. 72d st., and he was sentenced to three years in Atlanta prison.

Two girl employes, Marion Whaler and May Darling, who entertained customers and were indicted with Greenstein, were acquitted.

Half a dozen chagrined business men testified that they had been forced by Greenstein to sign checks for exorbitant amounts, although they had only had one or two drinks.

All said they had become dazed during taxi rides to Greenstein's establishment.

Asst. U. S. Atty. Ulysses S. Grant hinted that taxi drivers in league with Greenstein "might have diverted carbon monoxide gas into their cabs," to overcome pleasure-bent patrons and make them ripe for picking at the speakeasy.

STAFF OF STARS AT CONVENTION

Chicago, June 10 (INS)—Final tests were made today o all the special wires installed by International News Service over which news of the Republican and Democratic national conventions will be flashed to the Boston Evening American.

International News Service has assembled one of the greatest staffs ever brought together to cover the two major political conventions.

Headed by Floyd Gibbons, interationally known "head-line" hunter, the staff includes Claude G. Bowers, noted political writer; George R. Holmes, Frank Ward O'Malley, Elsie Robinson, Margaret Lane, Dorothy Ducas, Quentin Reynolds, William K. Hutchinson, William S. Neal, George E. Durno, Edward B. Lockett, Eugene Cadou and a score of other special news writers.

On They Come, Yet No Violence as Reds Are Ousted and Order Prevails

By ELSIE ROBINSON

(Author of "Listen World")

Washington, June 10 (INS)—Washington's puzzled.

And Washington is seldom puzzled. Being-sure-of-itself is the best thing Washington does. But this time something is giving Washington's well-known calm the jitters. And thta something is the B. E. F.

First they had 'em figured out as bums.

But bums don't organize in military precision. Form committees. Wear their rags as though they were diplomatic broadcloth. Bums don't live for two weeks hungry and cold, on the outskirts of a rich city and never commit one misdemeanor—never steal a loaf of bread or beg a blanket or insult a citizen.

Then, if they weren't bums, they must be Reds. Quick, Watson, the popgun—the great Communistic menace is upon us!

Veterans Act Like "Disgusting Patriots"

So Washington armed itself, took out accident insurance, hid the family silver and waited for the bombs to start. But the bombs didn't start. Instead, to the very obvious chagrin of the boys on the hill, the boys on the flats insisted on acting like disgusting partriots and drove even the palest pinks out of camp.

So then Washington decided that if they weren't bums or Reds they must be just plain saps. And somebody should go down and tell them to stop all this nonsense and go home. Then that would end this ridiculous fuss and we could all go back to our garden parties and conventions.

Food and Ride Home Fail to Tempt Them

Solemnly, at 8 this morning, eight big army trucks lumbered slowly down to Anacostia field. Solemnly 8000 pairs of eyes watched them come.

Well fed, smartly uniformed drivers sat on those trucks, the soldiers of today. Hungry, haggard men watched from that field—the fighters of yesterday. Medals on their ragged shirts—livid scars, newly opened wounds, broken bones and spines wired with silver splints, in their ragged flesh.

"Well, buddies," grinned the men on the trucks, "want to come for a ride?"

FATHER COX ARRIVES IN CHAPLAIN ATTIRE

Bonus army members gave the Rev. Fr. James R. Cox of Pittsburgh a rousing welcome on his arrival in Washington. He's for them. They're for him. At once the priest went into active planning with the men. In his speech he urged the men to organize against the law-makers who refused their bonus. He said: "Send men here who will look after the people, not the 500 millionaires who control the nation's wealth. Fr. Cox wore an army chaplain's uniform during his visit to the bonus army. M'DONALD FOR ARMS HOLIDAY

London, June 10 (AP)—An arms holiday of 10, 12 or 15 years will be proposed by Prime Minister MacDonald at the Geneva disarmament conference next week, the Daily Mail says.

This paper, which has come to be regarded as an accurate medium for expression of Mr. MacDonald's views, said the prime minister considers a long arms holiday as the alternative to reduction of armaments, prospects for which do not appear bright.

Mr. MacDonald and Sir John Simon, the foreign secretary, are leaving for Paris tomorrow for preliminary discussion of the Lausanne conference with Premier Herriot of France. It was expected that he will broach the suggestion of an arms holiday.

Hoboken, N. J., June 10 (AP)—Fish and phonographs for the bonus marchers encamped in Washington were on the second truck to leave the Frank J. Bartletta Association soup kitchen today.

A ton of fish, iced, is the piece de resistance. There are two phonographs, one from Bartletta's own home, 200 phonograph records, and 500 books. The load includes 2000 loaves of bread.

Bartletta said the truck would stop at a large Baltimore bakery to pick up an additional thousand loaves of bread that the bakery has donated.

Both are expected to be out of the hospital within a few days.

AMELIA PAYS VISIT TO DUCE

Rome, June 10 (INS) — Mrs. Amelia Earhart Putnam and her husband, George Palmer Putnam, New York publisher, were received in audience by Premier Benito Mussolini at the Venezia palace today.

The audience lasted 15 minutes. Air Minister Italo Balbo, who was present, confirmed Italy's intentions of sending a fleet of seaplanes to the United States, but did not mention any date.

Bonus Army, Prohibition and Rockefeller's Switch All Pop Up to Upset the Apple Cart

By FLOYD GIBBONS

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

New York, June 10 (INS)—Hello, Everbody!

Hop on board, boys and girls. We're off for that $350,000 pair of conventions in Chicago.

Well, that's a pretty cheap price-tag to hang on them. But what I mean is that $350,000 is the initial cost. Not the upkeep.

BIG NEWS POPPING

You see, the Republicans asked Chicago for $150,000 just to pitch their tent ther. The Democrats had a bigger deficit and, thinking their show would be bigger and better, anyway, asked $200,000.

Now it's up to Chicago to get the $350,000 back.

There's been big news popping lately. And out there on the lake front it will all simmer and then boil over and the froth ought to be the spiciest you ever tasted. So if your doubting Uncle Thomas has been telling you these shows are all cut and dried—that they will be the dullest in history—you just tell him to train has specs on Chicago.

Floyd Gibbons

Of course, your Uncle Tom's prediction that the Republican convention will be short, might come true. It may be short. It may break a record for brevity. But by hickory, it won't be both short and sweet.

And the Democratic pow-wow. Well, everybody expects it to break the 1924 distance record. But time isn't going to be the main element in that, either. There won't be much fun there—except to look at.

That's why we ought to be there early, with our tickets all engraved in curlicues like bank notes.

I did a little circulating down in Washington a few days ago. Mixed up with some of the boys who are supposed to rig up those conventions in advance.

HIGHER HURDLES

Well, sir, I never did see so many Democrats and Republicans dreading presidential convention-time. Republicans admit they don't expect any surprises ni candidates. That's just the trouble. They aren't at all sure whether the hosses carrying their money—they call them Herb and Charlie—can run as fast as they did in the Derby four years ago.

They've both gotten a little

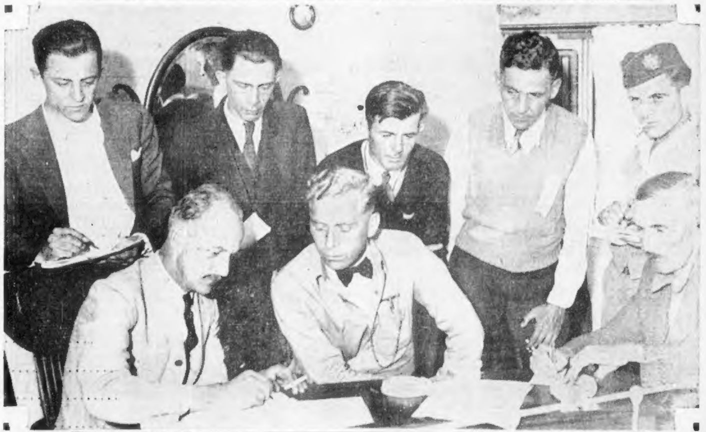
FATHER COX CHAMPION OF BONUS FORCES

"Stay here till hell freezes over." "Stick it out." "You'll never get what you're entitled to unless you stick." "If they won't give you this little bonus—turn them out of office." The veterans' uncrowned king of the day—the Rev. Fr. James R. Cox, Catholic priest, of Pittsburgh, was talking. You see him at the bonus army headquarters in Washington, as he addresses the bonus hikers. He's standing on roof of one of the "Camp Camden" barracks. Fr. Cox recently led an "Unemployed Army" from the Pennsylvania city to Washington. He arrived from Pittsburgh by air and personally carried the pleas of the Bonus Expeditionary Force to Vice-President Curtis and Speaker Garner. (International News Photos.)



GENERAL HEADQUARTERS BUSY SPOT IN BONUS ARMY

This group of men is guiding the destinies of the Bonus Expeditionary Forces now encamped along the Potomac river in the Capital City. They're urging President Hoover and Congress to pay them their bonus in cash. They are out of work. They want this bonus. They'll take a job. Some of this group went to see President Hoover, yesterday. They presented a petition urging cash bonus. They were led by Fr. Cox. Grouped about the conference table are, left to right, seated, Joseph B. Jeck, Jr., Walter Waters, new commander-in-chief; Arthur Hilton. Left to right, standing, I. C. Schooler, L. M. Fabriano, T. J. Toomy, F. A. Hoover and E. J. Heaney. Communists from New York and Detroit were expelled from the camp.

did not grin back. They looked at the trucks. Food in those trucks—all they could eat. Rest in those trucks for starved flesh and weary bones. Then they looked at the field where they stood. Grass trampled into an ooze—river mist lying low in a gray scum with the mumble of the dark water rising through it. Makeshift shacks—piles of straw—such as the poorest farmer would use to bed his pigs. A rusty portable stovef rom which comes, twice a day, watery slop on which even a pig would starve.

What Price Glory? Eyes Answer Query

Eight thousand pairs of eyes saw it all—counting the cost.

WHAT PRICE GLORY? THIS WAS THE PRICE.

This, and with each day, increasing handicap, heckling and humiliation. Yet—

Not a man spoke.

Not a man moved.

But the answer leaped in their eyes!

For a long, tense moment Anacostia Field lay perfectly still in that grappling, civil war of silence—

Then, sudden as thunder, the silence split!

From beyond the river came a sound—

THE SOUND OF MARCHING FEET!

And across the bridge—and up the hill—and down to the field—streamed eight hundred silent men.

Wrecks of men—days on the road—36 hous without food—riding in open gondolas. Tattered skeletons, caked with coal dust . . . their eyes blind scabs in seared sockets . . . their wizened flesh drawn back from set teeth . . . on they came, moving automatically like sleep walkers . . . following mechanically the torn flag waving in the lead.

Quiet and terrible as dead men, on they came.

Honor Lane of 8000 Welcomes Newcomers

Stillness on Anacostia field—such stillness that, as those dragging, dead feet struck the flats, one heard the dust rie in a ruhing cloud.

When it settled, those 8000 men had formed and stood apart in two great files.

THERE, IN AN HONOR LANE THE EIGHT THOUSAND STOOD — SILENT, UNSEEING, THE EIGHT HUNDRED MARCHED BETWEEN!

Then, the silence broke with such a roar that, a mile away, breakfasting Washingtonians bounced like bunnies and scuttled for their hideouts. Now, at last, the dreadful end had come! But it was only the B. E. F. saluting, with cheer upon cheer, the men who had been called "the fighting terribles" back in 1917.

Once a nation ad wept to read of the agony they endured—had thrilled to think of the heroism of those men who went tarough every hellish engagement of the war, experiencing all its horror, all its filth and brutality.

Once that same nation, cheering itself hoarse in gratitude, had welcomed those men home, pinned medals over their hearts strewn their way with flowers, promised them all the riches, all the honors of the country they had saved.

And now—this!

ONLY FORGOTTEN MEN TO CHEER THE MEN THE WORLD FORGOT.

This Is the Truth, Face It, or Turn Away!

So it goes day after day. Steadily the army digs itself in. Steadily the army grows. Ten thousand here—one hundred thousand on the way, so they say.

Thousands of men who have already known hell—hundreds of whom gave from three to six years of their life to this counrty, on battle field and hospital bed—now suffering a crueler agony than they ever knew in France. For then they fought with love behind them and glory before them. And now they fight, despised and outcast, treated like pariahs.

That's the truth! I don't blame you for not wanting to face it—for trying to evade it with polite excuses—for trying to rationalize it. I haven't wanted to face it myself—I, too, have tried to excuse it. But it has gone too far.

THE SHAMEFUL FACT IS THAT WE ARE TREATING THESE MEN ABOMINABLY... THOUGH WE PAY THEM A HUNDRED BONUSES, WE CAN NEVER ERASE FROM OUR RECORD THE SHAME OF THESE LAST TWO WEEKS... WE ARE ACTING LIKE COWARDS AND CHEATS TO THE MEN TO WHOM WE OWE ALL WE HAVE.

I am not sentimentalizing over these men. I know exactly what a serious problem they present. I realize that many fine people may believe sincerely that the B. E. F. should not have presented this problem at this time. And I am not trying to argue the point. But I simply say this:

EVEN IF WE ARE POOR, WE CAN STILL BE GENTLEMEN AND LADIES . . . WE CAN STILL BE BRAVE AND HONEST AND FAIR.

Honest Appeal or Rotten Treatment

Instead of trying, as we have done, to heckle and humiliate these men by every cheap device . . . instead of running away from them, or sneering at them, or treating them as criminals by trying to fingerprint them, or building preposterous propaganda against them, we could—if we had an ounce of gumption or self-respect—go to them like honest citizens and say:

"We have not forgoten what you did for us. We will never forget. We will hold you in everlasting honor and gratitude. But we are in a jam just now jsut as you are in a jam. So help us now as you helped us before, buddies. Help us to save this country, which is our common mother. Be patient—let us work together! Trsut us as we trust you! This is our zero hour., btu faith and love and gratitude know no ezro hour! HOLD ON . . . WE WILL GO OVER THE TOP!"

WE COULD SAY THAT. MAY GOD FORGIVE US BECAUSE WE DON'T!

Graduation Surprise Deep Mystery

After Winchester High's Year Book was distributed at the close of graduation last night, the graduates and audience were promptly in an uproar.

In the Year Book was a page of "kid" pictures of the graduates.

Appearance of the pictures is a deep mystery which the Year Book editors are as much at a loss to explain as anybody—at least they so claim.

Not the least surprised was the editor-in-chief of the Year Book herself, for her own picture as a first-grader was among the group.

Miss Shea says the girl went alone in a large car with some men. Both say they talked with Millie Hoyer in the Thacher st. cafe during the party preceding the ride.

WARNED TO BE QUIET

Mrs. LaDoulis was to be questioned further about a party she was on with Miss Conley two days before the murder and about her story that Betty Shea and a lawyer warned her to "keep quiet" while the victim's body lay unidentified in the morgue.

Although Mrs. Burgess' dramatic story was at first generally discredited, it remained unchanged under hours of questioning and police conceded that in several points it seemed more probable than Miss Shea's conflicting version of what happened.

One such point is Mrs. Burgess' claim that she and Miss Conley were deliberately run down by a small automobile. Miss Shea claims Miss Conley left Commercial st. in a large car—at least not a Ford.

Yet it was a Ford motometer which was found at the scene where the death car bumped the fence.

Another point in Mrs. Burgess' story checked with a new disclosure—the arrest of the victim on May 20 in Mattapan and her claim to police that she was a nurse. Mrs. Burgess says the slain girl was a hospital attendant.

ARRESTED AFTER PARTY

Miss Conley, it was shown, was arrested at 4:10 a. m. on May 20 in Harvard st., in the rear of the Mount Hope Cemetery, by Motorcycle Officer Arthur Reeves. She was intoxicated; there had been another party.

Locked up at the station, she said she was Jean Sullivan, a nurse, living at the Summit ave. (Brookline) address where the victim had a room as Mary Conley. When she was released next morning she said her name was really Elinor Moran, but that she was a nurse. Her description as taken by police exactly fits that of the slain girl and there is no doubt it was she, police said.

Although she pleaded guilty in court today to being drunk, Mrs. Burgess' case was not disposed of and she was held in $100 bail until June 13.

HUNT GANGSTERS

State police said they believed Miss Conley was a victim of an organized North End gang, engaged in bootlegging and other rackets, and preying as "a side line" upon girls who go on parties in the district, with either assault or robbery as the motive.

Several North End men are being sought for questioning.

Authorities have descriptions of several said to have been in the cafe at the time Miss Conley was there but they have no descriptions of the men in the car in which Miss Shea says the victim rode off.

MOTOR METER CLUE

Miss Shea was to point out to police the place in Commercial st. where, at 1 o'clock Tuesday morning, she says Miss Conley, under the influence of liquor, hailed the large car, and entered it, leaving her alone to go home in a taxicab.

State Detectives O'Neil and Sherlock submitted the motor meter to auto experts in an effort to determine whether it held any serial number or other identification which might connect it with the death car. They said that Betty Shea's story about Mary Conley entering an auto on a street near the restaurant, indicated that the Cambridge girl must have later transferred to a smaller car which carried her to her death.

GRILLED BY POLICE

The statements of both Miss Shea and Mrs. La Doulis were recorded by a police stenographer at the Back Bay station where she was grilled by Boston and State police last night.

Chief of Police Charles R. McCauley, of Woburn, was present with the state officers and the Boston police officials at the interview.

The officers admitted that Mrs. Burgess stuck to her original story that five men took her and Mary Conley, who she knew as Mable Jeanette Holland, to Woburn to put them on the spot.

CHUM AIDS IN DEATH QUIZ

Betty Shea, of Watertown, chum of Mary Conley, slain in a lonely section of North Woburn, is shown with her sister on her way to the Back Bay police station, where Miss Shea told of the party in the North End which preceded the girl's death. The girls took shelter behind newspapers when the photographers "snapped" them through the window of the auto. (Staff Photo)

BISHOP SPEAKS AT CHOATE

Twenty-five graduates of the Choate school, Brookline, were addressed today by Bishop Henry Knox Sherrill at graduating exercises. The seniors, their parents and friends were entertained later.

Of the group 21 will enter college in the fall, it was announced. The honor students are Olive Krauthoff, Lucille Wilson, Elizabeth Moore, Caryl Ringe, Janet MacLeod, Alice Cooke, Adelaide Burr, Ruth Hathaway, Alice Sheldon, Peggy Malone, Mary Wright and Barbara Burrell.

Philippines Revive Buffalo Bull Fights

Cebu, P. I., June 10 (AP)—Bull fights have been revived here, but the bulls fight each other, not men. They are carabao or water buffalo weighing a ton or so each, and they go at it fiercely. It is an ancient sport of the Moro Rajahs.

LAST DIVISION 4 'SPEAKY' SHUT

The last speakeasy on Division 4—at leat the last known speakeasy—folded up like an accordion today because of the police drive.

The furnishings were moved out of 30 Stuart st., and the bar was dismantled because for several days, with a police guard at the door, no business was done.

Owners of the place experienced some trouble dismantling the heavy bar and Capt. John M. Anderson, with Liuet. Gillis, Sergt. Mitten and Patrolman Demers moved in with a lot of wrecking tools and helped them. And how! What a nice pile of kindling wood resulted!

Car Hits Buildings, 2 Killed, 7 Hurt

Johnstown, Pa. June 10 (AP)—Two men were killed, one was reported injured, prabably fatally, and six persons were taken to hospitals when a large truck plunged down Frankstown Hill today and wrecked buildings.

The vehicle ripped through a meat market and a barber shop as though they were made of paper. It crashed through the front of one dwelling and into the side of another.

Dies in Burning Home

Baltimore, June 10 (AP)—John Niemozyk, 50, was burned to death, but his five children safely leaped from a second-story window into the arms of neighbors when fire destroyed their home this morning.

LILA BURGESS

500 Fishermen Adrift on Siberian Ice Floe

Moscow, June 10 (AP)—A dispatch from Irkutsk, Siberia, today said 500 fishermen were carried away on a drifting ice floe in Lake Baikal May 28. An airplane located the floe June 2 on the northern part of the lake, the dispatch said, and a Soviet steamer was sent to the rescue.

Spanish Priest Fined

Segovia, Spain, June 10 (AP)—A curate of a church in Derezo De Abajo was fined by the government today for publishing a ban of excommunication against the first couple married by civil ceremony under the new laws.

MYSTERY CALL OVER SUICIDE

Officials of the Southern Mortuary today awaited an unidentified woman who telephoned from New York that she was coming here to view the body of James W. Tyner, suicide.

On May 24, Tyner leaped from the third story of a Back Bay hotel, to avoid prosecution for defrauding another hostelry of $200. Another bill of $60 faced him at the hotel where he was staying.

Since his death Tyner's body has been unclaimed and police in New York, where he made his home, were unable to locate relatives.

The mysterious woman telephoned to both the Boston Evening American and to the mortuary that she was coming to view the body, but gave no further details.

Identification of Tyner was made from finger-prints.

60 Injured as 2000 Jobless Men Riot

Bristol, Eng., June 10 (INS)—Rioting by 2000 unemployed men and women appeared to be under police control today. Sixty persons were injured.

The demonstration began last night with a mob rush upon St. Peter's Hospital headquarters for the relief committee, which had refused to give an audience to the unemployed. Police charged, on horses and afoot.

Avers Reds Won't Sway Bonus Boys

Pittsburgh, June 10 (AP)—Communistic control of the bonus "marchers" in Washington, Rev. James R. Cox, said he believed today, will never appear.

"If a Communist would attempt to do anything rash, those boys would chill him," the militant priest said on his return from the capital, where he championed the cause of the veterans.

"The way police are handling the situation and the thousands of veterans in Washington is wonderful. Officers are showing more tact and creating more good-will than any police in such emergencies I have ever seen. The veterans would do anything for them."

Scripps Papers in Demand for Smith

New York, June 10 (AP)—Roy W. Howard, chairman of the board of the Scripps-Howard newspapers, announced that all Scripps-Howard newspapers were publishing today an editorial entitled "Give Us Smith," in favor of Alfred E. Smith for President.

The editorial describes Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt as "another Hoover," and expresses the opinion that Roosevelt and Hoover "possess in common one dominating trait—faced in a pinch with political consequences, they yield."

LOCAL LEADERS LEAVE SUNDAY

An all-New England delegation of Republicans will leave for the Chicago convention Sunday afternoon on a special section of the flyer "Minute Man."

Among the prominent Bay Staters will be Frank G. Allen, former governor, and Alvan T. Fuller, who has served the Commonwealth in the same capacity; Charles H. Innes and Mrs. Innes, John T. Lambert, editorial writer and political expert to the Boston Evening American; Louis K. Liggett, national committeeman; Leverett Saltonstall, speaker of the House; Bayard Tuckerman, Jr.; Sinclair Weeks, Edward C. and Edward E. Whiting and George F. Booth of Worcester, who is sponsoring a movement to make ex-Gov. Fuller the vice-presidential candidate.

C. F. Palmer, assistant general passenger agent of the Boston & Maine, will accompany the Massachusetts delegation. The party will reach the convention city shortly before noon Monday.

CLEANING YOUR FURS

"Ole' Mother Nature meant furs for cold countries—us trappers know that. Comes a hot spell and fur bearing animals look dull and scraggly. Heat raises ole' Ned with 'em—with your furs, too. Dries out the natural oil, cracks the skin, kills the lustre. Play safe—I says. Hand them lovely furs over at once to my friends, the expert furriers of I. J. Fox—they know best how to clean 'em and care for 'em all summer. That's their specialty. Cost? Shucks — it costs so much more to take a chance."

NEAR-BATTLE AS VETERANS OUST REDS FROM CAMP

munists half a mile or so to a vacant lot, where a strong guard was maintained to prevent disorder. They were to be escorted out of town today.

The steady influx had swelled the "Army" enormously, greatly adding to alarm over the camp conditions which the city health officer, Dr. William C. Fowler, yesterday pronounced frightful.

FOOD SUPPLIES ARRIVED

New supplies, however, arrived to ward off danger of starvation as well as disease. Several tons of food raised by a Hoboken Italian club were brought in this morning, and delivered to the camp officers.

Fearing an outbreak of contagious disease among the veterans, District officials spoke of quarantine, redoubled their efforts to have the various states discourage more marchers, and sought arrangements to distribute the men to some of the old forts and military posts which surround the capital.

The veterans yesterday, through Fr. James R. Cox of Pittsburgh and a committee, left petitions for payment of the bonus with President Hoover, Vice-President Curtis and Speaker Garner. Curtis was the only one of the three they saw, but their plea was read in both branches of Congress and was inserted in today's Congressional Record.

The House vote on the Patman bill to pay the bonus will come up Monday.

WANT JOBS ALSO

As the entrenched army of grim and sunburned veterans disregarded the District of Columbia's offer of free transportation home, they made it clear that they want not only the immediate relief of cash for their bonus certificates, but they want jobs as well.

They want the jobs that the 25,000,000,000 prosperity loan for public works will provide. They presented to President Hoover their declaration of their right to work.

Veterans' Administrator Frank T. Hines said after a conference with the President that in the event of an epidemic in the camp of the bonus army the veterans' administration would be unable to do anything for them. He said the hospitals in this area are already overcrowded.

The national phenomenon of this siege of Washington caused bitter debate in Congress as Senator Smith W. Brookhart (R.) of Iowa introduced a resolution directing the secretary of war to issue army rations to the bonus forces and all unemployed veterans in distress throughout the country.

MOSES FIGHTS PLEA

Fiery arguments took place in the Senate when Senator Wheeler (D.) of Montana, pleaded for congressional action on behalf of the bonus marchers.

Wheeler was accused by Senator Moses (R.) of New Hampshire, of providing a "direct incentive for revolution." Moses refuted the proposals of Brookhart and Wheeler, and said,

"The jobless should take care of themselves. Congress should not do it. I don't intend to let my vote be influenced by lobbyists, for whatever cause."

It ended with a twofold demand to the lawmakers of the land.

WALTER WATERS

PRIEST FLIES HOME

2—Jobs for the jobless veterans by appropriation of the $5,000,000,000 prosperity loan.

Father Cox, who addressed the encamped veterans at Camp Anacostia said, before he took a plane back to Pittsburgh last night:

"We left the petition and asked Secretary Joslin to take it in to the President. We told Mr. Joslin the only way Congress could solve this problem was to pass the bonus and to adopt legislation providing for the $5,000,000,000 prosperity loan."

As hundreds of bonus marchers continued to pour into the capital from every corner of the nation, with 10,000 reported en route, Congress gave evidence that it was aware of the dramatic silent entreaty of these jobless thousands, camped on its doorstep.

Rep. Rainey (D.) of Illinois, majority leader of the House, declared that unless the bonus army receives adequate relief from private sources, the government will have to provide funds for food and shelter for the veterans.

Rainey also endorsed the bill presented by Rep. Black (D.) of New York, to appropriate $125,000 to care for the bonus army of occupation.

ARMY OF 50,000 EXPECTED

Senator Thomas (D.) of Oklahoma, announced that he would endeavor to keep the Senate in session until the bonus bill is passed upon.

While Walter W. Waters of Portland, Ore., commander-in-chief of the bonus army, announced that he expected 50,000 veterans to join the siege of Washington, Senator Brookhart said:

"I am convinced that if these men are not taken care of, there will be trouble. I am therefore offering this joint resolution directing the Secretary of War to issue rations to these men.

BEANS AND BREAD

"In order to keep additional soldiers from coming here for food, I am requesting that rations also be issued to unemployed veterans in distress throughout the country."

In the meantime, the encamped veterans tightened their belts, after a meager meal of beans and bread, and were cheered by a flood of telegrams from all over the country, offering supplies.

Fr. Coughlin Gives $5000 to Aid Big Bonus Army

Detroit, June, 10 (AP)—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, pastor of the Shrine of the Little Flower, has made a $5000 donation to the "Bonus Army" in Washington for food and other necessities.

Fr. Coughlin

Announcement that he had borrowed that sum to give to the veterans seeking cash payment of bonus certificates was made by the priest at a midnight conference with newspaper men in his cottage in suburban Royal Oak.

Father Coughlin sent a telegram today to H. Ralph Burton, Washington attorney, instructing him to furnish the money to the veterans immediately. In making the gift, the priest said, he had in mind not only aiding the veterans, but also wished to hamper the activities of Communists among them.

Washington, June 10 (INS)—Police Supt. Glassford today outlined his stand with regard to the bonus marchers.

"The situation is primarily, 'police.' That is, if any situation which might lead to rioting or other disturbance developed it was obvious that men who were willing to fight their way against transportation difficulties for thousands of miles in order to reach the capital would be determined enough to fight hard for the cause which they came to represent.

"We had two alternatives—feed them or fight them. Obviously it was far better to prevent hunger and privation.

"There is no discontinuance of policy. The so-called discontinuance is entirely a matter of organization. When the veterans first arrived they were not organized to take care of themselves.

"Now they have a complete organization and can without difficulty relieve the police department of much of the administrative burden. They have commanders, quartermasters and commissaries."

700 Texas Veterans Get Ride on Train

Louisville, Ky., June 10 (AP)—Perched atop the cars of a long Baltimore & Ohio freight train, approximately 700 bonus marchers from Texas headed East toward Cincinnati shortly after midnight.

The train on which they were riding was bound for Washington, railroad officials said, and it was considered likely the Lone Star State "army" had finally hopped a ride all the way to the nation's capital, their objective.

ORGY OF ANGER NEEDED TO SAVE OUR GLANDS

By GILBERT SELDES

I HAVE BEEN READING J. Arthur Thomson's clear and fascinating Riddles of Science, and having discovered exactly how, and more or less why, a cat gets its fur up, I am in grave doubts about the future of the human race, for the emotion of anger seems to do so many desirable things to the cat that we, who aren't fundamentally different in our glands, ought to make it a point to preserve our capacity for fury. We ought to have an orgy of anger, just as the wise Greeks had an orgy of the physical appetites; otherwise some of our best glands may die out and leave us rather pale people.

GILBERT SELDES

Before I quote Professor Thomson on the cat, let me cite his word in passing on an abandoned idea.

"Several naturalists of half a century ago," he writes, "went the length of saying that the cat deliberately made itself bigger in the eyes of the dog by willing its fur to stand on end, but we now know that what happens is very different from willing or taking thought. The cat has an emotional storm . . ."

3-Headed Thinkers

This must be something of a blow to Bernard Shaw and the Lamarckians who answered yes to the Biblical query about adding a cubit to our stature by taking thought. At the end of Back to Methusaleh Shaw shows us his philosophers, some of whom (30,000 A. D. and about 28,000 After Shaw) have grown three heads, but have given up polycephalism as not worth the trouble (and not easy to show on the stage). The whole message of Shaw is that you can will yourself to do almost anything. The emotional storm of the cat suggests that we will less than we imagine.

Adrenalin Comes

What happens when the storm begins? . . . "A particular ductless gland, called the supra-renal body, situated in front of the kidney, is stimulated to increased activity. There is an extra production of a hormone called adrenalin which is . . . distributed by the blood throughout the body. It serves to increase the 'tone' of the muscles, the 'pressure' of the blood, the amount of sugar in the blood, the clotting power of the blood, and so on. One of its far-off effects is to stimulate the tiny muscles that raise the hairs. So the cat's fur stands on end, and its whole body is ready for a fight, which is often unnecessary . . ."

I note the happy coincidence (or the Divine plan) which prepares the body for a wound and prepares to check the flow of blood, even before the fight begins; it is economical that the same adrenalin which makes it possible for us to fight, stands ready to clot the blood and prevents us from bleeding to death. (You can buy synthetic adrenalin in drugstores, to stop nose bleed.)

Get Hot—Under the Collar

But Sir Arthur says specifically that the anger of a man is matched by exactly the same changes in his body and if I had the time I would take a few days off to worry over the fact that mankind is power to become angry. We make it a sign of intelligence not to lose our temper; we ask for calm in our shipping clerks and in our executives. And fighting is definitely out of the code of the gentleman and the bondsalesman. The whole process of civilization is against outbursts of anger and men and women pride themselves, after 50 years of marriage, on never having exchanged an angry word, let alone a blow. (The Dunmow Flitch, in England, is annually awarded to a couple which can give proof of their sweetness.)

Anger Is Sweet

I suspect that we need a little adrenalin in our make-up and that it has a beneficial result, even if we do not scrap and need clottage of the blood. Like other great emotions, anger makes us feel more alive, and the scientists have now shown us why. We are tremendously stimulated and, what is equally pleasant, our whole body becomes harmonious. Our eyes are keen to see an enemy, our ears to detect his footfall, our muscles to attack and defend, our feet to run. This internal harmony is a rare thing and if we have to get angry to achieve it, let us get angry.

Not Worry

Instead of anger, we have substituted a sort of continuous worry. We are seldom happy, seldom at ease. If nothing else bothers us, there is always indigestion—and doesn't a bout of rage, a fury of anger, drive that away? We worry about paying our taxes, but do not get angry at our politicians; we worry about the quality of our gin, but are mild and pasty-faced toward the Anti-Saloon League. We would rather walk out of a store than get into a fight with a salesman; we don't even curse back at truck drivers. We are becoming a little timid race and adrenalin will surely revenge itself by leaving us pale and defenseless, if we don't get into a few fights pretty soon.

IT'S A VISIT FOR DeWOLF

Although not a delegate, DeWitt C. DeWolf, secretary to Governor Ely, will make the trip to the Democratic national convention in Chicago with the Governor. He will meet many old friends in the Windy City, as he lived there for 30 years.

ONCE SOLD COAL THERE

Secretary DeWolf left his father's home in western Massachusetts at the age of 15 and during his long stay in Chicago became president of one coal company and vice-president of another. He married there and his four children were born there. He returned to his native state some 15 years ago.

WRIGHT DROPS IN

John D. Wright, who served as secretary to Frank G. Allen when he was Governor, and now member of the Tax Appeal Board, paid a visit yesterday to Secretary DeWolf. John hasn't been seen around the capitol building much since he took over his new duties a year and a half ago in the Metropolitan District Commission building.

LEADERS AGREE COOLIDGE IS OUT OF RACE

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

Calvin Coolidge is out.

The "Draft Coolidge" movement is dead.

Here in New England his most intimate friends and well-wishers have conceded he would decline the nomination for President if it were voted him at Chicago.

They have today decided to abandon the effort they had nourished to impress his name, his reputation and his availability upon the national convention.

Within the past few weeks the ex-President's most devoted admirers have sought to arouse his personal interest in the impending political conflicts and to win from him some statement on which to peg their hope to put him in the White House again.

DEAF TO APPEALS

A. B. See, the elevator man, broadcast to the political leaders of the country a declaration that Coolidge alone possessed the political skill and the confidence of the public necessary to restore normal conditions of prosperity.

Republican leaders in this section of the country have been feeling him out in one way or another. They have urged him to attend Chicago next week, feeling that his presence there might overwhelm the delegates and precipitate an overturn to him for President again.

To all these suggestions, requests and intimations the President has been coldly indifferent.

In one case he responded laconically:

"I am now in Vermont and intend to spend most of the time here this summer."

The Boston Chamber of Commerce sought to prevail upon him to address a notable luncheon, assuring him a national broadcast in order that the country might hear his words of wisdom.

MAKING NO SPEECHES

He told them, shortly and crisply, he is now a privte citizen and not in the habit of making speeches these days.

Others have sought to persuade him to join in the public denunciation of the United States Senate in its imbroglio with President Hoover.

He replied curtly that the Senate is an independent legislative body, with rights of its own, and it has not been his policy to belabor others up hill and down dale.

To all other requests and implications he has been as responsive as a clam.

I once told him I had heard an owl got into his chamber at the White House, that he stared the owl out of countenance, and the owl left in disgust, neither having uttered a syllable.

"Well," he smiled, "an owl DID get into my room."

The people up here know Coolidge. They understood him when he said, "I do not choose to run." They understand that his silence now and his refusal to give aid or countenance to the movement to draft him means that he will stand by his declaration to support Mr. Hoover.

WILL STAY AT HOME

Accordingly, the New England votes will be cast at Chicago in bulk for the President, and the New Englanders will head off any possible drift to Coolidge, even if they do both without enthusiasm. There is the likelihood that some delegate from Vermont, the Coolidge native state, will be selected by the Hoover managers to second his nomination, just as they did at Kansas City four years ago, to let the country and the convention know beyond doubt that Coolidge was out of it.

Not the least reluctant to abandon the "Draft Coolidge" movement was his intimate friend, William M. Butler, ex-United States senator, and who was chosen by Coolidge to manage his campaign for election in 1924. Butler, who will serve as the Bay State member of the resolutions committee, said today:

"Mr. Coolidge is not to be considered as a presidential possibility. The votes from this section of the country will be cast for President Hoover."

Which all means that the only living ex-President of the United States will be up among the maples and the pines of Vermont, far removed from the maddening whirl of national politics.

G.O.P. Facing Big Wet Battle in Chicago

Today's developments preliminary to the Republican national convention in Chicago next week are:

1—Demand for a clear-cut prohibition repeal plank in the platform grows as national committee meets to hear contests. Southern delegates demand a "bone dry" plank opposing even the plan for a resubmission of the question to the electorate.

2—Two other questions in dispute are: "Who will succeed Senator Simeon D. Fess of Ohio as national chairman?" and "Will Charles Curtis be renominated for Vice-President?" For national chairman President Hoover's advisers are talking of Gen. Robert E. Wood and Col. Frank Knox of Chicago, National Committeeman Mark Requa and Ray Benjamin of California and Secretary of War Hurley. For Vice-President there has been mention of more than a dozen names, including even that of former President Calvin Coolidge. But, paraphrasing a Hoover slogan of 1928, the standpatters are asking, "Who but Curtis?"

3—Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, delegate from California, is among latest arrivals, and is reported bemoaning the "opportunism" of convention leaders in talking of prohibition repeal or resubmission.

4—Swamped with applications for convention spectators' seats, placed on sale to the general public for the first time in history, officials said they looked for a complete sell-out by tonight.

Chicago, June 10—The Republican national committee settled down to hear its contesting delegations today in an atmosphere charged with potentialities for a prohibition rumpus.

While delegations from Louisiana, Georgia, Mississippi and South Carolina mustered their arguments before the national committee, party leaders were keenly alive to the rapid sweep of prohibition developments and the openly expressed beliefs of numerous incoming delegates that the party platform should at least carry a resubmission plank.

No definite indication came as to how far the leaders would attempt to go. Postmaster General Brown, one of the closest of the President's political advisers, arrived yesterday, but he said the stand the party would take on prohibition was up to the convention itself and no one would know what the plank would contain until it came from the resolutions committee.

REPEAL DEMAND GROWS

A fortnight ago it was debatable whether the administration would approve or the convention next week adopt, even a resubmission plank. Today it is debatable whether the convention will be satisfied with anything less than a straight-out repeal plank irrespective of the Hoover administration's wishes. Demand for clear-cut repeal has grown steadily the last few days.

Indiana Republicans went wet with a bang yesterday, and few things could have made a greater impression upon the Republican leaders here.

The drys are in despair. Represented here by Sen. Fess, chairman of the national committee until a successor is chosen next week, and by Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, a [illegible] of the 1928 campaign, [illegible] concede that the tide is running against them. For publication they will not be quoted; privately they are bemoaning what they call the "opportunism" of the convention leaders.

DRYS SILENT ON PLANS

Mark L. Requa, national committeeman for California, another close friend of Mr. Hoover, declined to discuss prohibition, as did Senator Fess of Ohio, chairman of the national committee. Fess, however, did echo a statement issued by the White House denying that the President had committed himself to any specific plank.

Among the other arrivals for the political battles was Dr. Edwin C. Dinwiddie, secretary of the National Prohibition Board of Strategy, and other dry organization leaders. They refused, however, to discuss any plans they may have formulated to fight the adoption of wet or moist party planks.

Two other questions "Who will be the next chairman of the national committee?" and "Will Curtis be renominated?"—also were heard frequently in the discussion that ran about the flag draped lobby of the Congress Hotel.

James R. Garfield of Ohio, who has been selected to head the resolutions committee, was mentioned as a possible successor for Fess.

CONVENTIONS BESET BY MANY ILLS—GIBBONS

By FLOYD GIBBONS

spavined and knee-sprung [illegible] carrying heavy weight. The handicaps will be different. And they'll have to run the other way around the track and jump higher hurdles than they did in 1928. Especially the prohibition and prosperity hurdles.

Democrats down in Washington have a lot of worries too. They don't know which man to nominate, and on top of that they have troubles in common with the Republicans.

Four years ago both parties could make their own campaign issues and stick to them. Now they've both got to make the same promises. They've got to prove the same thing in different ways.

In 1928 the Republican chorus could sing, "How dry I am." Now everybody will be asking Republicans and Democrats "How wet are you?"

VETS UPSET APPLECART

Yes, sir. They used to tell you that everything at a presidential convention was cut and dried long before the keynoter sounded off the first day. Guess things were going on just about like that up till a few days ago.

That's what's got the big party-builders worried. Delegates to these two conventions were all set to carry the same old battle scarred party standards. Then along comes a Betsy Ross, with a brand new flag. Not one—a whole new set.

Those delegates got their instructions weeks ago. Looked then like party leaders would pick new issues in the old fashioned way. Everything was peaceful.

And then—up jumped the doggondest set of sensations two political parties ever met up with.

Eight thousand hungry veterans marched on Washington. Camped there. Paraded there. Filled the halls of Congress. Sat right down o nthe Potomac and say they'll stay there till the yget the remainder of their bonus money.

That upset the applecart in Washington.

VOICE OF HUNGER

But now, a wing of the bonus army is marching on Chicago, and there's no telling what they'll do to those conventions.

Right on top of that John D [illegible]ckefeller, Jr., one of the great[illegible]t champions of prohibition, came [illegible]t against it.

Maybe you think that didn't [illegible]ake the platform-builders squirm. Delegates—all instructed—will [illegible]ve to write home to the folks [illegible]out that.

Boys and girls, the life of a delegate to these conventions won't be worth living.

If this were the old days, a Mark Hanna, or a Tom Taggart, or a Boies Penrose might have stepped in and smoothed things out. But these big leaders are all gone and we'll have the fun of watching the little bosses and the delegates themselves all sticking their fingers in this hot pie.

There'll be plenty to disturb a lot of voters who are used to taking anything they get in the way of candidate promises.

You know, the fellow who didn't have his mind made up about which candidate he wanted back when delegates were being hand-picked hasn't much kick coming if he don't like the presidential candidate and his platform.

But there are the jobholders, too. They'll be worried till the last train leaves Chicago after the second convention.

Why, I learned in Washington that 730,000 people look to the President for jobs. That makes more than a million people who'll have their hearts—and their pocketbooks — touched by the things we're going to see there on the shores of Lake Michigan.

So hurry aboard, boys and girls. Ringside seats are waiting there in the stadium—the place where the prize fighters dance aroun[illegible] under the footlights and batte[illegible] each other.

What are a couple of prize fighters, compared to this bout where nearly 2200 delegates will mix it u[illegible] for the biggest prize in the Unite[illegible] States?

'Don't Take Wooden Money' Wisecrack Is Gone; It's Here

Certificates in denominations of 5, 25 and 100 cents printed on strips of spruce by the Chamber of Commerce of Tenino, Wash., made their appearance yesterday at the Republican National Convention headquarters. They were brought to Chicago by Mayor James W. D[illegible] of Tenino, Wash.

Many persons bought some of the wooden cash and some merchants accepted the certificates as souvenirs in payment of small bills.

PRICE CHANGES SHOW MIXED IN WALL ST.

By FRANK H. MELOON

Price changes were mixed in trading on the New York Stock Exchange today, but good rallying tendencies were exhibited by a portion of the active list. Auburn Auto was again a high flyer as the trap around the bears jammed tighter. Auburn was soon up over a half dozen points.

At the same time General Motors was churned around unchanged and U. S. Steel, American Can and American Telephone varied only minor fractions from the previous close. B. M. T. issues were heavy.

In Boston Stock Exchange trading Edison yielded about a point of its recent good gains. United Shoe eased up fractionally.

Prices in the major bond list were mixed with variations from yesterday's close only narrow. Offerings of Brooklyn Manhattan [illegible] appeared to have dried up in the early transactions and the 6 per cent of 1968 traded more than a point to 71 and held well.

BYRD HOST TO PRESS GROUP

Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, Boston's polar explorer and ocean [illegible], received representatives of every Boston newspaper at a [illegible] showing of motion pictures of the South Pole flight at the Engineers' Club yesterday.

[illegible] the reception, an appreciation party, Admiral Byrd [illegible] a running account of his adventures at the bottom of the world while the many scenes of it were flashed on the screen.

Byrd also explained that his new [illegible] ship, the Bear, is on its way from the West Coast and will be [illegible] here, where headquarters for the next trip to the Antartic will be established.

"This meeting," he said, "is a small effort to show appreciation to the Boston newspapers for their kindnesses to my wife and me.

"The Boston newspapers have been so kind to my wife, in not bothering her, and have been so kind to me in everything I've undertaken that I feel I owe you a debt of gratitude."

The auditorium of the Engineers' Club was crowded with representatives of the papers, their families and friends.

Byrd [illegible] everyone present and thanked them for their interest.

A feature of the [illegible] was a radiogram received from New York city when the temperature was 96 degrees in the shade. At Little America the glass read 72 degrees below zero.

EDUCATOR FOILS PLOT, ANOTHER IS ARRESTED

Portland, Me., June 10 (INS).—Two Maine college professors broke into the news today—one as a hero and one as a prisoner.

A plot to extort $3000 from Dr. Julian D. Taylor, 86-year-old Colby College Latin professor, in Waterville, was frustrated by the nerve of the professor and resulted in the arrest of three men. They were released later but police kept them and several other suspects under surveillance.

Prof. Ivan de Tarnowsky, visiting fellow at Bowdoin College, in Brunswick, and former officer in the French army, was under arrest on serious charges as a result of a story told by a girl who said she was Lillian James after her arrest for passing worthless checks.

Prof. de Tarnowsky came to Bowdoin from France through the exchange of international universities. Police said he has severed his connection with the college. He served in the French army during the war and is well known as a lecturer.

The extortion plot against Prof. Taylor, one of the wealthiest men in Waterville, was frustrated by cool daring. Armed with a pistol and an envelope filled with blank paper, he proceeded to follow out personally the directions he received in a letter threatening him with injury unless the $3000 was paid.

As he walked calmly along the street he was followed by a man he cited to be one of the extortion group. Apparently he lost his nerve and jumped into an automobile in which were two confederates and fled.

The trio was arrested later, but police were unable to connect them with the letter and they were released with a warning.

Chicago Judge Weds Them Free; Gives Brides Cook Book

Chicago, June 10 (AP).—Divorces are not going to outstrip marriages in Chicago if Municipal Judge Edward B. Casey can help it.

He not only performs wedding ceremonies without charge but he gives each bride a cookbook so there won't be any cause of complaints about poor meals.

"This ought to be a permanent seal on your marriage," he says to every bride he marries, as he hands her a book of rules on how to cook a good meal.

His free wedding idea has proved popular with the brides and bridegrooms, but not with Chief Deputy Sheriff Charles Pe[illegible], who complained the judge was ruining the county's marriage fee profits.

Loss on Ancient Silk Topper Perils Brown Tradition

Providence, June 10 (INS)—A century-old tradition of Brown University, which was threatened because of the loss of a 35-year-old silk hat, was preserved today when the topper was found.

Nearly 160 years ago, when the university was founded, the General Assembly provided under the original charter that all commencement exercises be conducted at the First Baptist Church preceded by a procession from the campus. The graduating class became unruly during the procession and several windows were broken in the church, so the General Assembly at the next session added a proviso that the procession be led by the high sheriff of Providence County, and stipulated that his regalia comprise a tall, cockaded silk hat, a silk waist scarf and a sword or saber.

Last January, Jonathan Andrews, high sheriff, who has been leading the procession in his Gilbert and Sullivan makeup for 20 years, found that the silk hat was missing from his office. He thought it had been stolen and police were put on the trail, searching in second-hand stores and pawnshops, but without success.

Sheriff Andrews was faced with the proposition of leading this year's graduating class bareheaded, or spending $50 to have a hat made-to-order, because it is a very unusual hat.

Today, however, he went to his becah home in Shawomet, and found the hat safe in its leather case, in a locker. A deputy sheriff had taken it from the sheriff's office and put it in the locker, while construction of the courthouse was under way.

Aviatrix Dead

Paris, June 10—Despatches from Biskra, Algeria, said Lena Bernstein, French aviatrix, was found dead at a race track there.

EAGAN TO FIGHT DEATH OUSTER

San Francisco, June 10 (AP)—Charged with murder and held in contempt of court for refusal to testify in connection with administration of the estate of the woman whose death he is alleged to have instigated, Frank J. Egan, San Francisco's public defender, faced another ordeal today.

He was directed to appear before the board of supervisors on charges of official misconduct. His permanent removal from office is demanded by Mayor Rossi.

Egan's attorney, Vincent W. Hallinan, said the public defender would resist the attempt to oust him and would plead not guilty to the murder charge.

Egan refused to tell what he knew of the financial affairs of Mrs. Jessie Scott Hughes, 59, for whose death he has been indicted with Verne Doran and Albert Tinnin.

RARE ADVICE FOR SCHOLAR FROM ONE WHO KNOWS HIS WEAKNESS

—By ROBERT E. ROGERS—

OF ALL THE ADDRESSES which are at present inundating our graduating classes, scholarly societies, and other academic gatherings, one of the most interesting appears to me to be that which Walter Lippmann recently delivered before the Phi Beta Kappa, the scholar's society, of Columbia University. Mr. Lippmann, formerly of the New Republic and of the New York World, is in the enviable position of commanding considerable respect for his utterances from nearly everybody but the radicals who insist that he has abandoned and deserted them for the flesh-pots of conservative liberalism.

PROF. ROGERS

As a matter of fact, Mr Lippmann never was a radical. When he was graduated from Harvard over 20 years ago, he became for a time secretary to Mayor Lunn, Socialist, of Schenectady, but that experience apparently confirmed him in his belief that radical dogmas and formulas have little connection with reality. Since then he has made himself master of the problems of national and international politics, and his measured and detailed utterances are usually notable for their restraint and their hard common sense.

In his Columbia address he was talking to the members of the oldest fraternity in America, the fraternity of honor men in scholarship at all our important American colleges. The usual advice to these men is to get out and make their scholarships count in politics and public life. But Lippmann pours cold water on that idea.

"The scholar who deserts his books and his research to heed the importunate demands of the present does not do justice to himself and the world . . I doubt whether the scholar can do a greater work for his nation in this grave moment of its history than to detach himself from its preoccupations, refusing to let himself be absorbed by distractions about which as a scholar he can do nothing.

For this is not the last crisis in human affairs. The world will go on somehow and more crisis will follow. It will go on best, however, if among us there are men who stood apart, who refused to be too anxious or too much concerned, who were cool and inquiring and who had their eyes on a longer past and a longer future. By their example they can remind us that the passing moment is only a moment; by their loyalty they will have cherished those things which only the disinterested mind can use.

Scholar Helpless in the Present

It is doubtful, he continued, whether the scholar is after all capable of giving useful advice on current problems. It is doubtful whether prolonged study produces immediate practical wisdom. This condition results, not so much from the inadequacy of the scholar as from one factor of the conditions with which he is confronted—"that highly variable and incalculable factor, the will of the people."

Then he proceeds to pay his respects to the democracy in terms which many of us have desired to use. He characterizes the American democracy as "unsettled in its life and in its convictions, with no authority above it, without religious, political or moral convictions to control its opinions, without coherence or purpose."

"For what is most wrong with the world is that the democracy, which at last is actually in power, is a creature of the immediate moment. Democracy of this kind cannot last long; it must, and inevitably it will, give way to some more settled social order. But in the meanwhile the scholar will defend himself against it. He will build himself a wall against chaos, and behind that wall, as in other bleak ages of the world's history, he will give his true allegiance, not to the immediate world but to the invisible empire of reason.

Mr. Lippmann means, I take it, that the scholar will [illegible] himself to dealing with the permanent things of life. He will study history and try to apply it to the present. He will strive to analyze the cross currents of contemporary life and make patterns of a reasonable society. He will teach these ideas, write about them in the hope that they will filter down through his students and his readers until they affect what H. G. Wells used, hopefully, to call "the mind of the race."

But there is a catch in all this. For 150 years or more, the scholars of the Western World have been studying the democratic idea, justifying it from past history, analyzing it, arguing for it and teaching it. Most of the historians, economists, psychologists and philosophers, and sociologists have been furnishing the masses with profound and scholarly arguments in justification of democracy. These were always on a high plane, no doubt.

But history tells us that when high-minded and scholarly ideas reach the people, they invariably become degraded, vulgarized, warped by practical considerations, so that the practical results look very different from the original lovely theory. The democracy of which Mr. Lippmann justly complains, is only the result of scholarly ideas filtering down to the masses, becoming spoiled and twisted in transit, being adopted and used by the masses in immediately practical and frequently corrupt and degraded ways. The child has passed out of the stage of tutelage and the scholars are no longer able to keep it in leading strings.

Lippman a Scholar for the Masses

Since that is so, the counsel Mr. Lippmann gives about the ivory tower seems worse than useless. Curiously enough, Mr. Lippmann himself is the most striking example of a living contradiction to his advice. There is a good deal of the scholar in Mr. Lippmann. He has written scholarly books which have helped shape the thought of our intellectuals but which have never penetrated to the masses. Books like "Public Opinion," "A Preface to Morals" and his recent book on the international situation from 1930 to 1931.

But of all the work he has done, the most useful without question is his daily newspaper work. In the old World and now in the Herald-Tribune he has day by day brought the equipment and temper of a scholar to wrestle with the immediate problems of the day. He may feel that this work has been useless; others do not agree with him. Instead of filtering his ideas down through intellectuals and college men he has written directly to millions of the people who read newspapers.

Instead of studying democracy on the heights he has wrestled with it in the valleys. He has done his best to show how it works practically and can be made to work better. He has dealt with ideas in terms of everyday facts, not in terms of the long past and the long future of history. Who can say that he has not done well?

RAIDERS FIND A $20,000 STILL IN NEWTON

Mansion Occupants Flee, but Leave Alcohol and Costly Rum-Making Plant

In a stately mansion of the exclusive Oak Hills section of Newton police found a $20,000 still today still warm from recent operation.

A squad of four sergeants and 13 patrolmen broke down the door after suspicions of two patrolmen in a cruising car ended in a search warrant.

The latter two were Patrolman Joseph Smith and Michael Sullivan.

FIND ALCOHOL, SUGAR

Four vats capable of 1500 gallons each, 1000 gallons of mash, 5000 pounds of sugar, 101 empty five-gallon cans, 44 gallons of alcohol, receipts for delivery of 1500 gallons of alcohol and a quantity of women's clothing were found in the house.

Police Chief Michael T. Hughes said the mansion is owned by Mrs. Caroline M. W. Skinner of Newfoundland, N. J., who formerly occupied it, but moved more than a year ago.

An occupant who paid the water bill recently was sought. He is also believed to be the man who recently paid for extensive alterations on the house.

WOMAN NOT TOLD

The still was set up in the dining room and the ceiling had been broken through to an upstairs bedroom to make room for the apparatus.

It was equipped with an electric motor and auxiliary oil burning apparatus.

Chief Hughes said he believed Mrs. Skinner was entirely unaware of the use to which her former home was put.

Federal agents were notified of the find and a crew was set to work at dismantling it.

20 TO 32 YEARS FOR GILDEA

Found guilty of manslaughter, Thomas J. Gildea of Conant [illegible] Roxbury, was sent to State prison by Judge Edward F. Hanify for 20 to 32 years. Charles L. O'Brien of Brooks ave., Roxbury, was given 15 to 24 years on the same charge.

Asst. Dist. Atty. David Lasker had asked long terms for both and linked Gildea with the murder of a Roxbury grocer.

Lasker said:

"An old man in charge of a grocery store was held up and robbed by two young men, who killed him. While the grand jury returned a no-bill on the murder charge, one of the two was convicted of carrying a weapon and was sent to State prison. He went insane and is now at Bridgewater where daily he is raving, 'Gildea and I killed that old man.'"

SPEED KING ALOFT AGAIN

HAWKS FLIES TO NEW YORK

Capt. Frank M. Hawks, famous speed pilot, left East Boston airport today as a passenger on an American Airways plane for New York.

He planned to visit his home, returning next Tuesday or Wednesday flying his own Lockheed plane for further treatment at Massachusetts General Hospital.

Equipped with a new set of teeth, Capt. Hawks' greatest worry seemed to be whether they would cause him to lisp.

"I'd like to tell a joke but I can't smile because of my new ivories," he said.

The flier said it was his first travel as a passenger [illegible] He intends to resume [illegible]

"It seems good to be out of the hospital," he said.

The trip to New York followed an announcement from Washington that Capt. Hawks has transferred from the Army to the United States naval reserve aviation.

Enrollment as a lieutenant commander was made, the Navy Department announced, because of his work with high speed planes [illegible] and general knowledge of aviation.

Since his crash April 7 at Worcester, Capt. Hawks has started preparing for a speed contest with a new ship expected to be delivered in mid-September.

ALDERMEN VOTE INQUIRY AFTER LONG DEBATE

Charges of "favoritism" and "lack of attention to orders" in the police department brought orders from Somerville board of aldermen, at a meeting ended early today, for a thorough investigation of the police department.

The move was started by Alderman John Denning, who asked that the aldermanic public safety committee be authorized to investigate the system of extra paid details.

An amendment to include the entire department was adopted after debate on the proposal of James F. Stynes, chairman of the public safety committee.

ONLY CERTAIN FAVORITES

The order and amendment were adopted by a standing vote of 15 to 4.

"Recently, we passed an order that special details, carrying extra pay, be given to the younger men of the police department who are not getting full pay," Alderman Denning opened.

"I am informed that certain [illegible] get the work week after week who are full-paid men. Men getting $30 a week get but a small share of it.

"This detail work has been assigned to a sergeant and, I have been informed that he favors certain policemen and passes the work to them. He also assigns himself to three details a week at $7 a night, giving him $21 extra every week."

A plea by Alderman Burnett that the board hesitate to meddle with the police department brought Chairman Stynes to his feet with the amendment.

SAYS ORDER IGNORED

"The department pays no attention to the aldermen and it's about time they did," roared Stynes.

"Some time ago the chief was ordered to assign the detective force to someone other than himself. He is still sleuthing.

"We've got to make them know we mean business and I propose the entire department be investigated."

Chief Thomas Damery, the detail sergeant and the records of paid details over a period of several years will be before the committee.

WORK TO START ON NEW ROAD

Surveys will be started by the State Highway department to prepare for building of the new section of the 15-mile state highway from Cambridge to Concord.

Funds were appropriated by the Legislature and the bill has been approved by Gov. Ely.

The road will start at the Alewife Brook parkway in Cambridge near the overhead bridge and will be entered by an underpass traffic circle which will permit flow of traffic without crossing other lines of traffic. After traversing open land, the roadway extends to Lake st., Arlington, crossing near the outlet by Spy pond.

There will be no grade crossings on the highway.

BOY UNHURT IN 60-FOOT FALL

Paul D'Olimpia, 2, of Carver st., South End, escaped death in a 60-foot fall from the roof of his home yesterday. He received only a few scratches and a cut on the chin and was sent home from City Hospital, where he was taken by his uncle, Antonio Diomede.

Mrs. Rose D'Olimpia, mother of the child, was washing in their fourth-floor tenement when she missed him. She ran to the street but could find no trace of him. Diomede returned home and went to the roof to search.

Noticing a broken drain pipe brace at edge of the roof, he looked over and saw the baby sitting on the ground.

BELLHOP LOSES $10,000 SUIT

Karl Ekstrom, 23, former bell hop at the Myles Standish Hotel, on Bay State rd., lost his $10,000 suit against Miss Enid Merrill, a Brookline school teacher for 20 years, for alleged malicious prosecution. The Suffolk County jury returned a verdict in favor of Miss Merrill after three hours deliberation.

He claimed she accused him of stealing an English clothes brush when he came to her room in March, 1931, in response to a call.

She asked him to sit on the bed, he said, and he refused. He said he was so nervous that he unconsciously toyed with the brush.

She said he kept his hand behind him and that when she asked what he had in his hand he placed the brush back on the dresser.

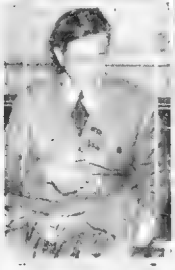
The 151st anniversary of the Massachusetts Medical Society was the event at the Hotel Statler and I was there looking things over. They were holding an election of delegates to the American Medical Association.

Here's Dr. T. H. Lanman, who was in charge of arrangements for this birthday celebration of the Medical Society. He's a busy man even now. He's checking up on the program, to see that everything is coming out just as he planned.



No, this isn't a set of burglar tools. It's a very delicate set of doctor's tools. The man looking them over is Dr. John F. Holmes, who hails from Manchester, N. H. I was kind of interested in this set, because you'd never think they'd cut, they're so fragile.

And this man, holding the model of a prehistoric dinosaur, is Dr. Robert B. Osgood, chairman of the arthritis exhibit at the celebration at the Statler. The original of this bone is said to be one hundred million years old. That's a little before my time, so I can't prove it.

DEMOCRATS OF WARD 4 BACK BOND ISSUE

The Democratic Club of Ward 4, Back Bay, last night endorsed the $5,000,000,000 prosperity bond issue sponsored by William Randolph Hearst as the best means offered for quick solution of the economic problem. The club has more than 500 members.

In an address before the meeting to plan a victory ball at the Ritz-Plaza June 16, Frank Bott, president, sponsored the indorsement.

"As time goes on it becomes increasingly evident," Bott said, "that the administration in Washington has no constructive plan for the relief of unemployment. With men starving before our eyes we must look to other sources for relief.

"The government," Bott said, "has failed us. Private charity is powerless to do any more. Unless something is done, and done quickly, I dread to think of what the coming months hold in store for this country.

"I am firmly convinced that a program of public work financed through this huge prosperity loan will in a great measure relieve further distress.

"There is money in the country, and a patriotic appeal such as brought the Liberty Loan to success, will bring it out.

"Mr. Hearst has undertaken a commendable work in sponsoring this prosperity loan. I think our small voice of approval should be added to the national acclaim given it."

The endorsement was unanimously approved.

HULL ASSAILED IN BANK CASE

The claim of John C. Hull, head of the banking division of the department of public utilities, that his indictment in the Industrial Bank and Trust Co. case was for political purposes brought a fiery retort from Asst. Dist. Atty. John J. Murphy.

Murphy's statement followed the arraignment yesterday of 16 men, all arraigned before on secret indictments returned by the Suffolk grand jury, the second batch of indictments arising from investigation of the closed bank. All pleaded not guilty.

Murphy said:

"In the eyes of the law Mr. Hull's claims are on no different footing than those of any other defendant. He stands accused of a crime. He is entitled to as speedy a trial as is consistent with public policy."

Malden Police Head Called Before Judge

SUFFERED FOR FORTY YEARS

Then One Lucky Day She Used Kellogg's ALL-BRAN

Here is great news for sufferers from constipation. Read Mrs. Kendig's voluntary letter:

"For about forty years I had been praying for a lasting remedy for constipation and its attending evils. To make it short, I ate nothing but ALL-BRAN and a little broth. Since that time (about ten years ago) I have not taken any medicine. Have been well, and entirely free from constipation." — Mrs. I. H. Kendig, R. F. D. No. 2, Lancaster, Penna.

Constipation is caused by lack of two things in the diet. "Bulk" to exercise the intestines. Vitamin B to tone the intestinal tract. Laboratory tests show ALL-BRAN furnishes both. ALL-BRAN also furnishes iron for the blood.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that in lettuce. Within the body, it forms a soft mass, which gently clears out the wastes.

Isn't it much pleasanter to enjoy ALL-BRAN than to risk taking pills and drugs—so often harmful?

Two tablespoonfuls daily will overcome most types of constipation. If you have intestinal trouble not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Serve as a cereal or use in cooking. It is not habit-forming. Recipes on the red-and-green package. At all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

KIDNAPING GANGS' METHOD OF PREYING ON UNDERWORLD

By A STAFF REPORTER

(Copyright, 1932, by the Boston Evening American)

One of the safest, least risky crimes as far as the criminal is concerned is commonly known as kidnaping. The "mobs" call it "body-snatching."

It is a new departure. As it is now practiced, under mob methods it had its birth during the present gang era.

This does not refer to the kidnaping of children, which is hardly in line with the mob technique, except under certain conditions, as we shall see.

The mob kidnapers or snatchers, pick their victims from among their own kind—gamblers with plenty of ready cash on hand, crooks with a wad of "fall dough," which is money for use in case of arrest, salted away.

Drug addicts, if they have funds, are easy marks, for they are likely to pay quickly in order to get back to their daily doses of narcotics.

There are also frequent body snatchings for the purpose of extracting information out of other gangsters.

Crooked Best Pay and They Don't Tell

Criminals employing mob methods seldom try to prey on persons not connected with some crooked game, racket or shady practice.

If a man of supposed good reputation is spirited away, it can be set down generally either as a fake or a case where he had some shady business the public knew nothing about. Or perhaps he hasn't paid his gambling debts.

The more crooked the victim the less likely he is to squawk to the police and the more apt he is to pay ready [illegible]

The snatching of individuals not connected with rackets themselves or through close relatives is too dangerous. And even the kidnaping of shady characters is considered too risky to be anything but a very rare occurrence.

These facts will show that it would be very surprising indeed if gangs had any hand in the kidnaping and murder of Col. Lindbergh's baby.

It is not the right lineup at all. On the other hand, the extraction of $50,000 "ransom" through Dr. Condon is a perfect example of mob method. It is the operation of the pay-off racket with which I shall deal in later instalments.

In the case of kidnaping and slaying of 10-year-old Salvatore DaMore of the North End several years ago, there was a bootlegging angle. The $5000 "ransom" in that case was collected after the child was dead.

Perfected by Capone When "King" of Chicago

Body-snatching incidentally is an excellent illustration of the preying of criminals on criminals, the working of one "racket" on those operating a different racket, which is carried out wherever mob methods exist.

Snatching was developed as an art in Chicago soon after A. Capone became recognized lieutenant of the organization that had imported him from Brooklyn for strong-arm jobs about 10 years ago.

The fever spread from Chicago through the Middle West on to California in one direction and New York and Boston in the other.

Detroit, Cleveland, Buffalo, Albany and other cities soon found they had gangs of snatchers who were well organized, practicing this game rather than getting their living by any other means.

Some of the biggest racketeers and mob leaders in the country have been the victims.

For 11 months members of a Philadelphia mob loitered in and around Chicago eating up more than $9000 in expenses awaiting an opportunity, which never came, to "grab" Capone.

"French" Belanger of New York, member of a most powerful group of racketeers, one of the best known operators in racketland and with a reputation among his kind as a square-shooter, was kidnaped and paid for it and loved it.

How Kidnaping Is Worked by "Mob"

Rumor has it that both the Boston racket king of whom I wrote a few days ago and his genial pal have been victimized in the same manner. There never was any official report to headquarters of these snatches but federal and Boston detectives have done some investigating on the subject.

I will shortly deal further with snatchings in and around Boston. First I want to describe a common method of getting a victim.

A victim is generally "fingered" to the body-snatching mob by somebody closely acquainted with his habits and anxious to pick up the usual 10 per cent cut. The "finger" may be one of the victim's pals or daily associates.

He is pointed out to members of the mob so that they may recognize him, and then he is approached at some time when he is not in a crowd and on some street where no policeman is around. It may be necessary to bring him to some such spot by a ruse.

An automobile draws alongside him, two men take him by the arms and before he has time to put up a fight he is being driven away. He is blindfolded and he is driven round many corners until all sense of direction is gone. This method has been used successfully many times.

Local gangs, either for fear of distasteful publicity, long ago made an agreement to settle their mob differences by conference, to eliminate kidnapings and shootings as far as possible [illegible] affects their profits.

Why Fleischer Came to Boston in Winter

But independent mobs of snatchers have worked here [illegible] success and there have been occasional visits from "big shots" from the outside, including "Red" Fleischer of the Detroit Purple Gang, who has been sought in the Lindbergh case.

Fleischer, as you may recall, was "traced to Boston" during the Lindbergh investigation. I am going to reveal here why he came here, and when. It was two weeks before the Lindbergh case broke, as a matter of fact.

He came here to pick up some easy money while "on the lam" from a Detroit job. He made his contact as customary with a certain mob leader and informed him of the purpose of his trip.

Fleischer came here to snatch one of the biggest gamblers in the city [illegible]

But he was side-tracked from it. [illegible] The leader refused to consent to the snatching. To give him a piece of work for his trouble and expenses another gambler with a sizeable stake was "fingered" to him.

Fleischer's luck continued bad, however, and he found Boston wasn't so easy as a lot of hard-boiled out-of-town mobsters think. In some undiscovered manner the fingered gambler was tipped off. The reason was [illegible] and very [illegible]

The fingered gambler quietly pulled his own wires, took the necessary precautions, and Fleischer or anybody else who tried to snatch him would have been shot full of lead.

For 24 hours a day he was under guard of a "gun" whom he had saved from difficulties with a voluntary offer of money 10 years ago, hiring a "mouthpiece," or lawyer, who saved the gunman from State Prison. The "gun" repaid the debt, and Fleischer, after 10 days hanging around, left town.

Gilbert, a good six feet tall, weighing 180 pounds when in condition and later ruled the Norfolk State Prison Colony welfare association with an iron hand before he made his escape accompanied by Joseph Hopping, alias Lawrence, who is now dead.

A [illegible] fingered Sherman [illegible] were informed that Sherman would have a large bank roll on him and would be at a house in Revere at a certain time to take part in a crap game.

On the day they went after him, he was there, but did not have his roll with him. They snatched him and locked him up in a house in Weymouth, where, a few days later, an installment collector found him half starved. The [illegible] from Sherman.

Another local case of body-snatching, which included torture [illegible] this game for another purpose. It was Gilbert's pal, Hopping, who was the victim in this case.

A [illegible] The woman was the sweetheart of [illegible]

[illegible] was connected. She told Hopping. He [illegible] his pals and they hijacked the load.

[illegible] make a date with Hopping. When the latter showed up he was grabbed and taken to a spot where matches were applied to the soles of his feet until he told where the load had been taken. Part of it was recovered.

Torture Marks on Hopping in Death

The marks of the torture were still on Hopping's feet when he died a few weeks ago at City Hospital. He had turned to stick-ups and taken an apartment in the Back Bay with his addict sweetheart and soon after was fatally wounded in an encounter with police, on the same night that his pal, Harry Elsmore, was slain.

[illegible] weighing only about 130 pounds, but both times he gave battle and in spite of being slugged with blackjacks, foiled the snatchers.

They waylaid him in a building once, but although he lost what money he had with him, he escaped the snatching for more money that they had planned. He [illegible] wise guys that they induced to help them failed to make him retract. But they beat the case in court.

BOOKS AND CHARACTERS

—By LINCOLN KIRSTEIN—

The newspapers are so filled with the news of those people in the world who control the destinies of the continents, and necessarily, that it is hard to imagine there are any other powerful men left unnoticed. From John Nance Garner to Benito Mussolini, the newspapers publicize the characters of public action in whatever way is expedient to their governors or special interest. But there is, of course, a relatively small group of very active, if momentarily silent human forces which exist in the remoter places of the globe who once having had power may hold it again,—men who have in the pressure of events become to the regimes they helped to create or destroy the opposition.

It would be impossible to penetrate into the womb of the future to realize who the leaders of this country will be in ten years time, though these men are receiving their apprenticeship at this moment, in the events of which we read every day,—and indeed the men themselves can scarcely know.

It would seem, perhaps, from the perspective we may think we have, or more possibly from lack of information, easier to forecast a few of those men now latent in Europe, who may have much to do with future changes, if and when the changes come. It was incredible to the delegates of the Congress of Vienna to imagine, when they gathered in 1815 to share up Europe [illegible] that already Napoleon was laying out plans for his return from Elba, plans which would literally nullify all of [illegible] hoped for dreams of [illegible] Yet the Corsican [illegible] who landed in the [illegible] shifting by, announced [illegible] Paris press as Bonaparte [illegible] Bonaparte First Consul [illegible] Napoleon Emperor [illegible] within the space of a week.

DE VALERA'S CASE

[illegible] years ago was Eamon De Valera, proscribed rebel and sentenced [illegible] who is [illegible] of the Irish Free State? [illegible] was the Prime Minister of England imprisoned as a dangerous pacifist?

Perhaps the most powerful and [illegible] most dangerous exile of [illegible] Leon Trotsky, with Lenin the co-creator of the Russian revolution, now deported by his own government to the Island of Prinkipo, near Constantinople, [illegible] by England, France and Germany [illegible] which he could reasonably require that asylum. Trotsky's life, which he himself calls only "an attempt at autobiography" (Scribner's), must remain one of the most exciting human documents of the decade, indispensable [illegible] the engineering of the [illegible] revolution, in the history [illegible] and a most important criticism and explanation of the method, behavior and policy of the U. S. S. R. at the present moment and as long as the regime [illegible] remains.

[illegible] deprived of [illegible] friends and sympathizers who [illegible] the Soviet prisons or are in exile [illegible] the necessary documents to give his history [illegible] documents the unimpeachable [illegible] of a perfected chronological accuracy, waits patiently and philosophically for what the future will bring. But as a writer he continues to [illegible] pamphlets, polemical attacks, statistical surveys, philosophical and dialectical studies of Marxism and [illegible] course, discontinued. The first volume of his wonderful history of the Russian Revolution was reviewed in these columns some months ago. The second volume follows in the Fall. His industry is enormous, unflagging.

BORN IN 1879

Lev Davydovick Bronstein was born in the remote village of Yanovka in South Russia in 1879. Later he took the name he found on a forged passport and was known as Leon Trotsky. His father was a Jewish farmer of very moderate means. He recalls his childhood, generally speaking as "gray," neither very harsh, nor very happy. He studied in nearby schools for eight years and was first arrested for revolutionary activities at the age of eighteen.

He received his education, that is his university learning, mainly in the Czar's prisons where he was continually kept incarcerated in different periods for four years. Here he read omnivorously, not only the philosophy of Karl Marx but on such diverse subjects as free masonry, on which he wrote a book, now lost, American and European history and comparative religion. Trotsky has an extraordinary memory and though his life has been a life of action he prefers study and contemplation. In exile in Siberia he spent two years on his first assignment, and on his second two weeks. The story of the second escape and return from within the Arctic circle to his friends in 11 days, will rank with Casanova's escape from the Venetian Leads as one of the great prison breaks in history. As a foreign emigre he lived for 12 years all over the European continent, in Vienna, Berlin, in London, where he first met Lenin, in Barcelona, Paris, Madrid.

Most of the time he was occupied with revolutionary politics, trying to weld out of the numerous radical factions a single united front to break Czarism and effect a world revolution for the working class. He wrote with a particularly fiery and passionate pen either in papers he controlled or wherever he could get space. In 1915 he was sentenced, in his absence, in Switzerland to prison in Germany. The next year he was expelled from France and Spain. He was in New York working on newspapers and addressing crowds when the February Revolution broke out in Russia. On his way back from America he was interned by the British in Canada. He was chairman of the 1905 St. Petersburg Soviet (society) of workers delegates and occupied the same chair in 1917.

He took a violent part in the decisive October Revolution, when the U. S. S. R. as it now exists was born out of the vacillation of Kerensky's provisional government. As the People's Commissary (ambassador) for foreign affairs he contacted and concluded separate peace negotiations at Brest-Litovsk for the Czar's Austria-Hungary, Bulgaria and Turkey.

RAISED RED ARMY

As people's commissary (minister) for military and naval affairs he spent five years in creating a Red army and restoring a Red navy. This enormous job is described in great detail in some of the most fascinating pages of Trotsky's life. Two years of this time he spent on a specially devised railroad train which could dash from one front to another with great impact, reorganizing troops and strengthening centers of attack. The great French revolution had 16 armies against their enemies in 1793. Russia had only two less in 1920.

Trotsky himself, untrained in strategy, found himself a general, actually in command of forces which, in an engagement only less important to his own cause than the second battle of the Marne was to the French in 1916, finally after heroic losses saved Petrograd. And he created an army and a navy against the violent opposition of his own party, against the left-overs from the old militaristic regime, and against the armed opposition of a Czarist civil war. In the peace that followed he directed and reconstructed the country's broken down railway system.

The story of his connection with Lenin, of Lenin's ultimate illness and death fill the end of his book. The history of his systematic betrayal and persecution by Stalin and members of the military reaction of course make up the most controversial actions. Trotsky writes with a righteous clarity, with all the documentary and personal proofs of a dispassionate attitude, as far as one can tell who knows little about Russian party politics. He spares no one, least of all Lenin and himself. His hatred of Stalin is cold and contemptuous of long standing. Whatever one may think of the reasons for his present exile on the disagreement of policy over the idea of permanent revolution of international proportions one cannot help admitting Trotsky did through years of disinterested, dangerous labor, work to a tremendous goal

HAVING ONE'S NAME ON MISS MARY PORTER'S LIST of debutantes for the season of 1932-33 does NOT mean being really IN society . . . if it did how easy for every young maiden whose parents have money enough to send her to a select girls' school and give a large ball in her honor to launch their children IN society . . .

ABIGAIL ALDRICH

The list which came out about a week ago is simply the names of entries . . . sort of like any race . . . and it will be almost a year before the girls who make the social grade will really be known . . .

Of course there are some . . . about 50 on this roster . . . who would be the favorites if there was betting on the outcome . . . daughters of mothers and fathers whose social position is assured beyond question . . .

There are others whose fathers have distinguished themselves or amassed so huge a fortune that they could not afford to be ignored . . .

Others will be taken in because they are splendid types of young womanhood . . . good sports, refined, wholesome girls.

In the Forefront of Future "Buds"

WE ARE GOING TO ATTEMPT TO GIVE YOU A BRIEF outline on the prospects of some of these future buds . . . you will remember we did it last year much to everyone's interest and amusement . . . and as we have said so many times, anyone who takes a society column SERIOUSLY is lacking in a sense of humor in our eyes. Nature's greatest crime.

Shall we commence with the alphabet . . . which does not mean the A's have it . . . it just means that we have to make a beginning . . .

We will first take the names of girls who we think are pretty sure of making the Vincent Club . . .

Junoesque Blonde

ABIGAIL ALDRICH, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] Aldrich of [illegible], is a Junoesque blonde . . . whose mother came from [illegible] . . . her father [illegible] from Providence, R. Can Women Be Good if Idle?

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Elsie Robinson

I WONDER if idle women can be good women.

I wonder if all these loafing ladies I see loitering around are really worth the upkeep some man is paying.

Mind you, I'm not saying they can't or aren't. I am just wondering. And that's reasonable, for idle women are a new phenomenon to me. Matter of fact they are a fairly new phenomenon to the world.

Back in the 80s and 90s when I took off females were still supposed to qualify as useful citizens. Of course some of the girls have always been tramps. But the majority of em held down jobs just as men did.

If you were a youngster you played around but you also got ready to dig in. You carned how to sew and cook and keep house and having learned, you were expected to get busy and to put on a regular performance as wife and mother. Which most of us did.

Some of us naturally had an easier time than others. Some of us could afford maids to help in the home, some of us couldn't. But, regardless of wealth or social status I can't remember a young woman of my acquaintance who couldn't or didn't stir up a cake or starch a shirtwaist or mind her own baby whenever needed.

Nor did that mean that we were shackled to drudgery. Ladies were people even before they had votes, and they managed to flit and flutter considerably between domestic chores. But an absolutely idle female married or unmarried was practically unheard of.

Femmes who just gadded about were either shiftless or—Sh! Sh! Sh!

But nowadays—lady loafers are as common as woodticks in May and I suspect, just about as big a blight on the body politic. Every apartment house, every hotel lobby, every department store or movie is jammed with them zigzagging around, killing time trying to start a little amusement for themselves or digging up a thrill.

In fact if you're a smart girl you're supposed to be idle and stay that way. "Only saps work" has become the smart feminine slogan of 1932. Girls were born to be glorified, not to fill jobs, and any poor young thing who has to earn a living, either by working in an office or in her husband's home, is regarded with high means of pity both by herself and the rest of the female sex.

Which, of course, we might have expected. Look at our films! Read our popular magazines! Do you behold our beautiful heroine at the gas range, the kitchen sink, the sewing machine, the market counter? No, you don't. Unless she's a nitwit. Mazie, the Beautiful Cloak Girl invariably ends by loafing around in a penthouse negligee or a Miami fig leaf.

Even the ads spread the glad tidings. Look em over! What, according to them, is the most terrible tragedy that can happen to a sweet young woman? Dishwater hands, dear! Hangnails! That to hear the ads tell it, is why ladies leave home, and husbands go into the doghouse.

So bright gals in 1932 do nothing —and do it all the time. Wherefore I'm moved to ponder—just where do they go from here? What happens to the female sex if you turn it into a tramp?

I know what happens to a man if he is idle. He goes to the dogs. I know what would happen to me if I were idle. I would raise Cain.

So—what's the answer?

Can a woman be a play girl, and still know the value of work; know the meaning of patience, courage, self-sacrifice, loyalty, co-operation?

Can females be loafers, and still be self-respecting citizens, reliable wives, real mothers?

Correct Manners

When to Wear Long Gloves

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN

1. Is it necessary to wear long gloves with a formal gown? If so, are they taken off during dinner?

2. Are the little jackets worn with the dresses at all times or are they left off if the dress is worn at formal affairs?

S.

1. It is a matter of choice whether or not gloves are worn with even formal gowns. If the [illegible] thinks that the effect is better if she wears gloves then she would wear them. If she thinks that harmony will be served if the gloves are long, then she should wear long gloves. If she thinks it is smarter to wear the short, chic gloves now so much worn, then she may wear these.

2. The wearing of a jacket with the dress usually gives the costume an informal air.

The Best Man

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN

I am to have the honor of acting as best man for my friend's wedding. There is to be a reception at the home of the bride, and a theater party later. Is it the duty of the best man to pay for the theater tickets or is that the groom's responsibility? Or would it be proper to go "Dutch treat"? BEST MAN TO BE.

If the best man wishes to give this party, he may, but there is no reason in the world why he should be expected to give it. The groom, I think, should give this party, but there is no rule about it. It would not be proper to go "Dutch treat" for an occasion of this kind.

The Doorman

DEAR MISS BEECKMAN:

In stopping a car before a store entrance and so forth where there is a doorman who opens doors for others to alight, is it necessary to tip? Also if he takes your car and parks it, is it necessary to tip? INTERESTED.

Unless the doorman does some [illegible] for you, as park[illegible] it is not necessary for [illegible] to tip him.

Meats for Hot Weather

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Friday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

DO YOU BELONG to the army of folks who begin to cut the family's meat quota just as soon as [illegible] into spring? [illegible] it may be? [illegible] to a food fact. [illegible] that we need meat [illegible] much in warm weather as we do in cold, since meat is a [illegible] containing all the [illegible] necessary to build up [illegible] and these [illegible] Summer just [illegible] Winter.

VEAL GOOD IN SEASON

In [illegible] of the de[illegible] I enjoyed at [illegible] Ann [illegible] at the [illegible] smart do[illegible] often [illegible] when [illegible] broiled tomato [illegible] then a [illegible] combination of [illegible] topped with [illegible] of [illegible] flanked with [illegible] we had [illegible] Martha Lee [illegible] on [illegible] on [illegible]

[illegible] lamb [illegible] now, [illegible] idea that [illegible] beef, lamb and chicken [illegible] we thought that veal was less easily digested than other meats. [illegible] research shows that [illegible] in the stomach [illegible] as do beef and lamb. Of course some people may not take care of veal properly, but this [illegible] of other foods.

[illegible] experiments [illegible] bear out the fact that pork is as completely digested as beef and [illegible] It is true that fat pork [illegible] more slowly, but this does not mean that it is in any way indigestible. Pork is high [illegible] as well as economical food that should be included frequently in our menus from the [illegible] of variety and palatability.

Experiments show that chicken stewed, roasted or fried remains in the stomach fully as long as beef or mutton. So there goes our theory that chicken is more digestible than beef or mutton.

MEAT FOR CHILDREN

The latest findings in nutrition are that children should have meat just as soon as the first set of four teeth are cut, but scraped beef and bits of well crisped bacon may be given to the infant after the eighth or ninth month.

The meats best suited to a child's diet are beef, lamb, mutton and poultry. Also heart, liver, kidney, tripe, tongue and sweetbreads. These meats should be roasted, boiled, stewed or simmered, but never fried. We know that liver is not only a splendid body builder but valuable as a blood regenerator, and all kinds of liver can be used to advantage, even the lower price beef, sheep and pork livers just as rich in nutrition and potent in iron and vitamins as the more expensive calf's liver. And remember when you're shopping for meats there are two distinct types in every animal, the tender cuts and the less tender. And nature has endowed these latter ones with special virtues that make up for their lack of tenderness. The cheaper cuts are high in flavor-giving extractives and in nutrients, its health and life-giving elements.

Meat in good condition is firm, bright and odorless. [illegible] tender, juicy and well flavored. You can judge the tenderness by the texture of the lean meat; the grain should be fine and as free as possible from connective tissue, stringiness and gristle. They should be firm to the touch with a smooth velvety appearance and well marbled with creamy fat.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Lynn Harding, twenty-two and beautiful, is ambitious for a career in the Seacoast Bank and Trust Company. She lives at a girl's club, but its institutional atmosphere annoys her. Breakfasting one morning, she meets Tom Shepard, confidential secretary to the Vice-President of the Trust Department. She lunches with her friend and chief, Sarah Dennet.

NOW GO ON—

"OH, I SEE—a direct legacy to the Seacoast Trust Co." Lynn's eyes danced. "But why didn't they let him go on with his engineering?"

"I don't know." Sarah [illegible] the waiter and [illegible] a menu. "Will you have a sweet, Lynn? Two French pastries, then, although I shouldn't. I'm getting fat. I don't know," she repeated, recalling herself to the topic of conversation. "I believe there wasn't enough to put him through, or that Mr. Norton thought he had better start in working. There is no surer way for a young man to learn the banking business, generally, than by becoming secretary to a banker, only so few do. I think that he—young Shepard—took a secretarial course before coming in with us."

"But he doesn't take dictation, does he?" [illegible] Lynn wondered, [illegible] Tom Shepard [illegible]

"No, Miss Mason does that. His job is to meet people and be tactful, I believe," Sarah told her, "and to keep track of Mr. Norton's appointments and carry confidential messages for him and all that sort of thing."

ERRAND BOY

"General errand boy," murmured Lynn.

[illegible]

"The Wilkins boy pestered you to return home, I imagine," she ventured.

"Oh, about as usual." Lynn flushed. "He always thinks that when he arrives in town full of the possibilities of the dental equipment business I will fall on his neck from sheer admiration and homesickness. He's a good lad," she added.

"Well, I don't know him, but I do know his mother," said Sarah firmly, "and I must say I'd hate to see you go back and be our Mrs. Dental Equipment Wilkins."

"Don't worry," Lynn laughed. "Marriage is the last thing that would interest me now, and you know it!"

Presently they went back to work, [illegible] on the main banking floor for Sarah to cash a personal check. Then they went [illegible] Lynn watched them taking on and discharging their human freight.

Lynn, unaware of that fleeting scrutiny, said: "You were awfully sure of me, weren't you?"

AWFULLY SURE

Tom denied it, laughing. "No, your error. Awfully sure of myself, of what I want. I couldn't wait till breakfast. Look here, you don't dislike me or anything, do you? I mean we were introduced properly—and all that."

"Even if you didn't remember."

"Check," he admitted impenitently. "Am I—don't spare my feelings—am I the sort of fellow no nice girl ever goes out to dinner with?"

[illegible]

Lynn asked thriftily, "Can't we walk or take a bus?"

"Oh Lord, a practical woman!" He helped her into the cab and settled himself beside her. He said: "This is an occasion. After you get to know me better I'll permit you to save me money."

[illegible] danced. She felt suddenly self-conscious. What an idiot he must [illegible] her an idiot. He [illegible] very pretty girl, and she knew it [illegible] something he had been looking for ever since he had seen her at the cafeteria counter.

"What about homely ones?" asked Lynn, delighted.

HE LIKED HER

He liked her. He liked her a lot. His kind of girl, cute as a trick, a regular honey, intelligent as the devil, a sense of humor. He liked her the better for not claiming "Oh, Mr. Shepard, do you really think I'm pretty?" or something equally inane. He answered, lighting a cigarette and offering her his case.

"Have a fag? Homely girls—well, I'm sorry for them, but I don't give a hoot whether they work or not."

"That's good." He put the case away.

She asked curiously, "You don't mean to say that you object?"

"Well, no, why should I? Personally, I don't like stained fingers," he admitted. "I mean that girls who have to have their cigarettes in taxis and in theater lobbies are so expensive. You see, even if they smoke your brand," he confided, "they always feel it their duty to order another kind."

"You haven't much use for girls?"

"Not any more. In the plural," said Tom.

"Do you know where you're going?" asked the driver suddenly.

They regarded him blankly. Tom remembered that when the driver had inquired "Where to?" he had merely waved a vague hand in the downtown direction.

[illegible]

TO THE VILLAGE

"Oke," agreed the driver.

[illegible]

[illegible] "Here's mud in your eye," he said. "And now I'll let Mrs. [illegible] order. It's [illegible] You like veal, don't you? Well, if you don't you'll learn to. Broccoli? I thought so. And some of that fatty stuff in glasses with a kick in it. And coffee. Large [illegible]."

[illegible]

"Sara[illegible]," she [illegible] her best in great [illegible] "Now [illegible] Tell me all about yourself so I can reciprocate. I promise to curb my impatience while you spin your yarn. Then I'll tell [illegible]."

"There isn't much [illegible]

[illegible] Tom at the university; of her sense that she was wasting time. And of her arrival in New York, Sarah [illegible]

SOUNDS AWFUL

"No, I live in a business club for girls."

[illegible]

"Hard luck," he said, "but you have about fifteen years to go, haven't you?"

She replied promptly, "I'm twenty-[illegible]."

[illegible] between [illegible]

"It looks like such a lot," said [illegible]

"Elegant soup," [illegible] Tom. "When I'm broke I order me one and it stays by me all day."

[illegible] TALKED ON

[illegible]

"Don't tell me any more," begged Tom. "You poor kid."

[illegible]

"We've a radio. And a phonograph. We have to be in at 11:30 or do a lot of expert explaining. We've a parlor where we can receive gentlemen visitors." She looked at him, her head on one side, gray eyes shining through black lashes. "The visitors have to meet the directress and there's an awful rush to see who gets the couch in the corner, if more than one girl is entertaining. It's great fun," she added, remembering young Wilkins and one or two others.

Tom said, sighing, "Well, we'll spend our time at the movies, then. Do you skate? That's nice of you. We'll skate. Bus ride. Now and then we'll see a good show. Oh," mourned Tom gustily—"oh, for the good old days when every girl had a back parlor for her personal use and the family could sit in the kitchen!"

That was skimming over [illegible] faces and they [illegible] each other briefly, confronted so soon by the changing standards and [illegible] conditions for young people who at twenty-[illegible] and twenty-[illegible] [illegible] each other [illegible] and do not possess back parlors and [illegible]

"Your turn," Lynn reminded him.

"No, not yet. What about this bank business? You don't really like it, do you?" he asked.

He [illegible]

"I didn't listen, I'm afraid, when your department was first explained to me, so I asked old Gunboat about it."

"Gunboat?"

"Norton. Did you ever look at his shoes? ... I asked him today. He was tickled silly. He thought I was beginning to take an interest in the organization. In a way, he was right. Do you mean to tell me that you expect to sit at a desk for the next forty years looking up the annual dues of clubs and things?" he demanded.

"Of course I don't expect to," she told him. "There are other jobs. Better ones. I'm mad about the work. I'm going to start courses at Columbia nights, in February, going to learn all I can. I like the whole atmosphere of the place."

"That's more than I do. Oh, well, what's the use of bleating? I couldn't go on with what I wanted to do, and that's that. Only," he grinned at her—"I've been taking night courses, too."

"Oh, Tom!" She regarded [illegible] Banking?"

"Radio!"

"It comes natural to me," he continued. "Gee, I'm nuts about it. I could eat it up. I started to get my M.E. degree at Sheff, you know. Radio. Girl, I've a set I built myself at my rooms that will get anything from here to heaven and sometimes, when the static is bad, a bit of the other place too. You'll have to come and listen to it."

[illegible]

"I'd love to. I suppose you're always tearing it to pieces. Father has one. It's his only hobby. It never works because he's always doing something to it."

[illegible]

Lynn and Tom find they have much in common about educating themselves. Read about it tomorrow.

Daily True Story

The Double

DOROTHY DARLING, flamboyantly billed by her publicity man as "The Girl With the Million Dollar Eyes," sat in the waiting room of the municipal airport in a neat panic. From time to time she glanced nervously at the clock above the [illegible]. [illegible] shaking hands seemed fairly [illegible]

For a moment Dorothy [illegible] there stunned. It was like a horrible nightmare. [illegible] She had never [illegible] girl before. Didn't even know she had a double. Had Ed been deceived into thinking he was eloping with the real Dorothy? Of course not. Ridiculous.

Ed had merely been using her. [illegible]

"I guess I've been a fool," she reflected bitterly. "Well, anyway—" she whispered as a tear trickled from under the dark glasses, "I won't go back home or to the studio either—ever."

[illegible]

CURIOUS CROWD

[illegible]

"Hurry, darling!" said Ed's voice. "We can just make it."

He scooped up the overnight case as he spoke and dashed for the runway. In a sort of daze Dorothy hurried along beside him.

Then—all at once—in the [illegible] of a moment before, she was laughing and crying at the same time.

"Those two men are private detectives," he grinned at her. "They've been dogging me for a week and I couldn't shake them. So today after we'd arranged to meet here I called up a friend of mine who is make-up man at another studio. He got hold of an extra girl who resembles you and made her up into a pretty good double. She agreed to go through that little act we staged for $50. There'll be one grand explosion when those detectives take her to your mother."

Wigwam Not Likely to Hold Sunday's Mob

Who's dat knockin' at the door? Or rather clawin'? It's your old friendly enemy, the Cubs. The Chicago Cubs with whom our rampaging Braves have been battling for the lead all season. The Chicago Cubs, led by the old Boston vilyun, Rogers Hornsby. What a red rag is to a bull Hornsby is to the Boston fans. My, oh my, but the Cubs-Braves series, which opens at the Wigwam, tomorrow, should be a nice, gentle little Donnybrook, shouldn't it? It'll be such a nice, gentle little frolic that if the Weather Man only will smile on Sunday the Wigwam will fill out with such a crowd that it'll look like Fatty Arbuckle. Cubs vs. Braves in a demon battle for the top apartment in the National League. Call the cops and ring for the ambulance. Lead us to it!

When you give credit where credit is deserved you even have to hand the vilyun a bouquet now and then. Rogers Hornsby deserves a bouquet for the way he has been keeping the Cubs up, despite a run of hard luck. In the first week of the race he lost Woody English, his star shortstop. A little later Kiki Cuyler, the greatest all around outfielder in baseball—[illegible] the league's best baserunner, thrower and fielder, was put on the bench with an injured ankle, and has been there ever since. Hornsby, despite the fact that he is notoriously weak in going back after [illegible] had to go out there himself and patrol Cuyler's [illegible] field. [illegible] needed Hornsby's big bat more than they feared his fielding. Last Wednesday in Brooklyn Charlie Grimm dislocated his wrist and Hornsby had to station Catcher Gabby Hartnett, who hails from [illegible] near Worcester, on first base. Despite the way old Hard Luck [illegible] the Cubs are still up there fighting it out with the Braves.

Bobby Smith [illegible] cations with the B[illegible] George [illegible] be welcomed by [illegible] and the Rabbit, [illegible] up the river to the [illegible] to make his pal, [illegible] Charlie has been [illegible] baseball, he is a great [illegible] ukelele throb like a S[illegible] Rudy Vallee.

It's the pitchers who have been keeping the Cubs in the pennant hunt. The pitchers and good old Riggs Stephenson. Before the season opened they thought Riggs was all through and put him on the retired list. Accidents gave Riggs a chance to get in the lineup and he's been killing the old apple and burning up the outfield. Stephenson is an old schoolmate of Joe Sewell of the Yankees. Riggs and Joe played together for their Alma Mammy, the University of Alabama, and were together again with Cleveland. But back to the Cub pitchers. Smith, Bush, Malone, Grimes, Root and Lonnie Warnecke make up about the best pitching staff in baseball. After three years hanging around, Warnecke has found himself. He started off by winning five straight and now has a record of eight out of 11, if we're not mistaken.

When Pat Malone, the Bad Man, is good, he's very, very good. If you don't believe it ask Shono Collins. When Pat first came up from the American Association and was turned back by the Cubs because he wouldn't behave, Shono was managing Des Moines of the Western League and needed a pitcher badly. He went after Malone, despite everyone told him to steer clear of Pat, who couldn't be handled. Malone won 26 games and lost 2 for Collins.

Lud Wray, coach of the Boston Braves football team, hasn't been asleep at the switch. The little birdies say he has rounded up a great array of gridiron talent [illegible] against Yale. Special [illegible] and A. Weston [illegible] year with the [illegible] signed. [illegible] of Holy Cross and the [illegible] Colgate. [illegible] about the [illegible] comes to Boston [illegible] the football Braves.

Even if the great Paavo Nurmi isn't allowed to wear Finland's colors in the coming Olympic games, the Flying Finn will throw a great team into the fray. Those two youngsters, Lauri Lehtinen and Lasse Virtanen, who hung hot on Nurmi's flanks, when he wrecked the world's two-mile record last year, are likely to make it one and two for Finland in the 5000 meter event. Finland may [illegible] place with Iso-Hollo. Venzke, Hallowell and other American milers will have to run in record time to beat Harry Larva, the present Olympic 1500-meter champion, and Eino Purje, who ran third at Amsterdam. In steeplechase, 10,000 meter and Marathon the Finns will have Ritola, Loukola and Marttelin, a trio hard to match.

In the Olympic weight events Finland will have a remarkable representation. The three Jarvinen brothers, sons of the old Olympic discus champion, are a team among themselves. Aki holds the world's record for the decathlon. His brother, Kalle, tosses the shot 51 feet and Brother Matso holds the world's javelin record of 2[illegible] feet, 3½ inches. Antero Kivi scales the discus 159 feet. Porhola finished second to O'Callaghan in the hammer at the last Olympics. Besides Matso Jarvinen the Finns have another great javelin thrower in the former record holder, Eino Pentilla. In Sjostedt Finland has a hurdler who has equalled the world's record and Tuulos was good enough to win third place in the hop, step and jump in the last Olympics.

"All" School Nine Has Power and Speed

By GEORGE W. GRIMM

Another schoolboy [illegible] season has come and gone and with the exception of a few teams the equipment has been put away until 1933.

So this being the end of the season, here is the customary [illegible] team made up of boys who are the best performers of the season in their respective positions [illegible] would form a powerful [illegible] nine of [illegible].

For pitchers we have Danny Lynch of Somerville and John Muggsy Kelly of Cambridge Latin who were outstanding. These two lads had everything and the latter pitched his nine to the Suburban League championship. For the third twirler we selected Henry Phelps of Mechanic Arts, a lad who turned in some brilliant pitching performances.

We did not have a hard job picking the catcher. Dave Barry of Lynn Classical is about the sweetest receiver who ever wore a glove in schoolboy circles. Blessed with a great arm, plenty of brains and hitting ability, this lad is a stand out.

Tom Bilodeau of Boston Latin is the outstanding ball player of the season. Starting the year at first base he was pressed into service in the twirling department when Latin needed pitchers. His work there was high grade and in most of his games he held the opposition to less than five hits.

The shortstop position we hand to Everett Kelly of Lynn English. This lad [illegible] a great fielder and his batting won many a game for the Shoe City school. He has a great [illegible] and can handle a ball either to his right or left. His work was notable on a team that won the Essex County league championship.

Third base was an easy position to pick for Bill Timmins of Boston English stood head and shoulders above all the other hot corner men.

In picking our outfield we have selected three of the best [illegible] in schoolboy baseball. Joseph Powers of Cambridge Latin, Bill Chesterfield of Somerville and Charlie Hoar of Jamaica Plain. The latter is used sometimes in the box but always could hit when playing either position.

MAYOR TO BE GUEST AT TOURNEY

By BILL GRIMES

After a lapse of five years, the Boston Retail Trade Board returned to the Charles River Country Club today to stage its thirteenth annual golf tournament.

The golf committee has done such a thorough job this year that it has developed more interest in today's tournament than has been displayed in two years. It is predicted that nearly 100 members of the Boston Retail Trade Board will play at Charles River this afternoon and there will be a score of guests, including Mayor James M. Curley and City Treasurer Edmund L. Dolan.

Since Wm. Filene's Sons Co. retired the Schaschke Cup from competition in 1927, the E. J. Frost Cup has been emblematic of the store championship and is the feature trophy of the annual tournament.

Incidentally, the Schaschke Cup was awarded to Filene's after the last get-together at Charles River, and Filene now has two legs on the Frost Cup. At the Unicorn C. C. in 1928, Wm. Filene's Sons Co. won the Frost Cup and successfully defended it the following year at the Salem C. C.

However, the C. F. Hovey Co. was the low team at Kernwood in 1930 and last year the Shepard Stores not only took possession of the Frost Cup but set up a new record of 290.

Due to the press of business, H. D. Hodgkinson will not play for Filene's this afternoon and E. J. Frost, donor of the championship trophy, has been substituted. Otherwise Filene's will be represented by the same combination that carried on last year: Jack McCartny, Jack Egan and George Saxe.

As a Filene's victory would mean [illegible]

"HE SHALL NOT PASS" chirped Gus Mancuso, Cards' backstop, as he presented a stonewall defense when Bill Urbanski tried to score for the Tribe in the first inning of the Thursday fray. Bill went down and out. The Tribe will try to grab one verdict over Cards in series windup today.

Reese of Cards Steals Rabbit's Thunder

By JOE CASHMAN

With or without the permission of the copyright owner, Jimmy Reese, new second baseman of the Cardinals, [illegible] the manner [illegible] Rabbit Maranville [illegible] cated.

[illegible]

Jimmy is the [illegible] purchased a few [illegible] from Oakland by the Yankees.

After hitting .346 for the Yanks in '30 his average fell off to [illegible] last season, when he was in poor health, and he was released to St. Paul.

Purchase of Reese by Cards a Surprise

His [illegible] Sunday was the [illegible] surprise for the champions, with their numerous [illegible] purchase players from minor leagues [illegible] and Jimmy had done nothing but warm the bench for the Saints since early in the season.

The wisdom of the transaction, however, is already evident. The Cards haven't [illegible] a game since Jimmy became one of them. His first appearance was in a doubleheader against the Reds and his great work was responsible for the Streetmen winning both games. In the two wins the champs have scored over the Braves he has [illegible] tried his part very well.

The Cards [illegible] pay $6,500 or a [illegible] of that for him, but they have a $100,000 player if Jimmy keeps on cracking that apple as he has since joining the club.

The champions [illegible] way in the [illegible] They have [illegible] two games in as many starts from the Braves which [illegible]

The Cards can be beaten, but only by the smartest sort of baseball. The Braves had them on the run in the ninth inning of the second game only to go dumb and toss away a 2 to 1 verdict. The Bob Brown, who had won five straight games, suffered his first defeat.

Going into the final frame trailing 2 to 0 and with only two singles to their credit off the veteran Jess Haines, the Warriors started a rally which might have carried them to victory had they played heads-up ball.

Knothe singled and went to second when Urbanski followed suit. Leach beat out a bunt and the sacks were loaded with none out. Worthington [illegible] deep to right. Knothe [illegible] and Urbanski reached [illegible] Another long fly would [illegible] the score.

Clark was put on to run for Leach at first as Schulmerich went to bat. The first pitch to Wes was a short passed ball and Clark was given the signal to set sail for second. He [illegible] before he got around to [illegible] ball had been recovered and he was nipped at second. Then Schulmerich popped out.

Clark should never have started after hesitating, but as long as he did go, Urbanski should have tried to score. He had a good lead off third and Catcher Mancuso had a long throw to make.

Even though he were caught the Braves would have been just as well off with a man on second as on third with two out and a safe [illegible] necessary to tie the count.

American Team to Play at Wimbledon

New York, June 10 (AP)—Ellsworth Vines and all the other members of the American Davis Cup team are to compete in the British tennis championships at Wimbledon, it became known today.

Frank Shields, Wilmer Allison and John Van Ryn, it was understood, have booked passage on the Europa, leaving here next Tuesday, and will arrive in England just before the championships open Monday, June 21.

It is understood these three stars were not being sent as official representatives of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, but were going on their own.

"When I retire from the wrestling game I'm going to get myself a home near a golf club and bat the little agate around every day.

Mr. Boston

"After riding on trains all year and showing in a [illegible] or so places it is a relief to get out in the open air and play golf.

"Wrestling is a hard, tough game. Especially when one has to step in and wrestle after a long train ride. I hate trains and upper berths.

"Guess my life is harder than that of other grapplers. Somehow folks want to see me get punished. The other night at Camden, N. J., some pop-eyed bird rushed to the edge of the ring and threatened to hit me with an umbrella if I attempted to use the ropes to get away from a tough hold. I looked him straight in the eye and he choked up and ran.

"I have been beaned by about everything a fanster is able to throw as far as the ring. It's getting so bad in some towns that I need a police escort to keep the mob from hanging me to the old apple tree. Do you wonder that I like to get out on a golf course where things are so peaceful?"

Favors Donnell for Washburn Go Referee

"THERE HAS been a lot of loose talk as to who I would like to see referee my finish mat bout with 'Gentleman' Jack Washburn at the Boston Garden on next Wednesday night.

"Between you and me, I'd like to see Charley Donnell in charge of the show. Charles is a former wrestler. He doesn't try to inject himself into a bout he is referee-ing, while he doesn't lose his nerve when the gallery gets start showing.

"The bout between Washburn and myself figures to be a rough one. I don't want a fellow in charge who will get frightened when the going gets spirited. All I ask is the right to battle Washburn to a finish. Let the better man win."

[illegible]

"WHEN I belted the ball today," said Strack, "I pictured it as being Washburn's dome. Too bad I cannot carry a mid-iron into the ring with me Wednesday night.

"That fellow, Johnny Ford, the pro at the Blue Hill Country Club, would be heavyweight wrestling champion of the world if they would let him use a putter in the ring. He was on one of the greens after a long drive and a brassie shot. He dropped a 40-foot putt just like I'm going to drop Washburn."

Sarazen's Card of 283 British Open Record

Sandwich, England, June 10 (AP) Gene Sarazen, who led the British open golf field by four strokes at the end of the third round, scored a 74 on his final 18 holes today for a 72-hole total of 70-69-70-74—283.

[illegible]

[illegible] Sarazen [illegible] round and needed a 70 to tie or a 69 to win. Havers was the last Briton [illegible]

Gene's final card

Whatever chances Armour had of winning his second British title went glimmering when he took 5—6 for the last two holes of his third round.

On [illegible] although he made an excellent recovery from a difficult lie he missed a two-yard putt and needed five.

The 18th was a comedy of tragic errors. His tee shot was square in a bunker and he only pitched out 15 yards. His third was 30 yards short of the green as he apparently underclubbed the ball with his iron. He overran the hole with his fourth, missed a short return putt for a five and needed six [illegible]

Havers Off to Poor Start in Final Round

Havers started out his final round 5-4-3 to be five strokes behind Gene at that point, Sarazen making the [illegible]

Undefeated in three games, the Boston Shamrocks, pacemakers in the race for the American Box Lacrosse League championship, tackle [illegible] at Fenway Park.

[illegible] Yankees 13 [illegible] at Fenway.

Due to the inferiority of the Yankees, Manager Nies used his spares during most of last night's contest. He rested up his stars [illegible] Jack [illegible] and Jerry Maloney, for the strong Toronto team as he is anxious to start on the next road trip with a clean slate.

The Caughnawaga Indians gave a fine account of themselves against the Yanks and made a lasting impression with the 3000 fans who turned out despite the rain.

Saylor and Alfred scored two goals each and Tom [illegible] scored one and [illegible] credited with [illegible] as was Diabold, the fourth Indian.

Although the Indians were the big scorers, Paul Mackesey was the star of the game. Mackesey tallied twice and made two fine assists but it was his defensive playing that took with the crowd.

Time and again, Mackesey took out opponents with clean cut but terrific body checks. He hit Rice in the first period, tossed him about six feet [illegible] the Yankee was fortunate [illegible] serious injury.

Personalities of the Air

Plans are almost complete for a broadcast by WAAB of the Revere Dance Marathon, to take place in two wks. Linus Travers, erstwhile football an'ncer, and Gerry Harrison, wrestling describer, will likely be at the mike.

So listen for descriptions of outside [illegible] and [illegible] holds. Imagine he-men football and wrestling an'ncers describing the tra-la-la-la movements of light-fantastic trippers!

Altho Harry Frankel's Singin' Sam programs [illegible] the summer, he'll [illegible] from the NBC Old Singin' Master series. Paul Dumont, ex-an'ncer, will sub for him during next month . . . Abe Lyman's sponsor has decided to brave the hot months and has renewed with CBS for the season . . . WNAC has added another dance music group on a regular schedule—the Paramount Ballroom with Al Sterita's orch. heard nightly starting next Wed. . . . Those open air [illegible] concerts heard from [illegible] on WEEI will take to [illegible] work each Tue. starting [illegible]

For his new shaving cream sponsor, who tells you to "rub it in," Ray Perkins is doing just that to list'rs by singing as his theme "You Have Only One Face."

[illegible] "Great Big Bunch of You" . . . cigar folks, "I Say It's Spinach" . . . watches, "Time on My Hands."

With Walter Dee [illegible] and George Bancroft [illegible] a program honoring the winner of the Shriners' convention song contest will be WEEIed at 11.30 tonight. Claudette Colbert is scheduled to speak, and judging the contest are Irving Berlin and Paul Whiteman . . . Georgie Price has become the envy of many a CBS [illegible] And [illegible] Georgie wears size 4 shoes . . . Don't be surprised if B. A. Rolfe joins CBS . . . Or if Phil Cook does the same.

Wal, slowly but surely, irritating an'ncers are being scratched off the list. P'raps next they'll fire "hot" singers and discharge electrical transcriptions.

Girl About Town

—By ALYCE SIEMENS—

Beyond Ken:

I know how simple polyps propagate their lowly class
And the detailed physiology of grampuses and grass.
I am privy to the reason why a butterfly at night
I can name you every Greek who fell before the walls of Troy
And can tell you why Patroclus was Achilles' favorite boy.
On erosion, erysipelas, and escalators too
I can offer facts statistical that no one ever knew.
I can tell you why the mungoos and the cobra are so hostile
And can chat in many languages with glibness Pentecostal.
But there's something makes my haughty mind turn grovellingly humble—
How a dizzy little dame like you could ever make me tumble!
—Dolorous Diogenes.

Bachelors Grand!

Last night we met one of the most eligible and charming South Boston bachelors yet! . . . 'Twas at the Victory Dinner of the South Boston Al Smith Club at the Municipal building in South Boston . . . And the bachelor we're picking on is good-looking young Dave Nagel . . . We discovered that he's running away from the ladies and towards that representative's election . . . And what a smile! . . . We'll stump speech for him any day! . . . Congenial Pat O'Donnell, the toastmaster, was an easy-to-look at free lance too! . . . And some more of those hold-outs on the Pretty Ones are George Donovan, Robert E. Bigney, John J. Reardon, Robert V. Lee, Francis Kelley, John Foley, William P. Prendible and William P. Hickey . . . They were all there last night causing all those lovely South Boston maids such heart troublings . . . Not forgetting tall Frederick Foley who blushes like this and said he didn't care for the girls—never-the-less, he has manners that attract a strange lady on first sight! . . . Joe Rubin was on hand to sing his dialect numbers, as only he can sing them . . . Likewise our (air) rivals, "The Gossipers," Jack Shannon and Marie Stoddard . . . And Charlie Maxwell manipulated the pianoforte! . . . Are we elegant? . . . Which reminds us that there's a lot of rehearsing taking place now between Alma "Pocahontas" Shepard and Charlie—for a vaudeville act, of course!

He's the Author

Dishing Away!

Joe Rosenau, newspaperman, must be letter perfect in crooning lullabies by November! . . . Why does Marty Coughlin spend so much time inspecting the chapeaux in the Copley-Plaza's hat shop windows? . . It's because Margaret McDevitt is just inside . . . Grasp it? . . . Eddie Anderson, of the current RKO Keith-Boston unit, began yesterday by being nasty to Hortense Myatt (witch of the swell disposition) of the La Salle's staff . . . If Eddie just wouldn't burn up so early in the morning, perhaps he'd thereafter . . .

About to Give In

Frankie McCarron, the engineer from City Hall who is suffering with blushitis every time he thinks about being altared with charming Kathryn Peters of Charlestown, may do it when you're not expecting him to . . . Another City Hallite, Celia Kirby, has Tom of the "Musical O'Briens" helping her fill up that hope chest . . . And if Cambridge's Mary Murphy isn't trousseau-shopping she should be—what with Manuel Neves, the "Mayor of Paddock Island," out hunting for an apartment! . . . Should we tell Gretchen "R-U-Listening" McMullen that flamey-haired Jackie Kein is going to market for a 'diamond? . . . South Boston's Kay Trask is the Sweet Reason that Supt. of Milk st.'s station house, "Dapper" Joe Newtley, may throw his bachelorhood to the puppies? . . . Winnie Conroy sends Columbus ave.'s Frank Scott a red apple every day . . . Just a rosy reminder that she may give in and set the day anytime now! . . . One thing Charlestown's Leo "Potato King" Savage never does on Sunday is to miss the 5:15 train for Norwood and neat package. Mary Murphy . . . We must correct figures in Wednesday's column, about Phil Baker getting over $400 per week now . . . It should have been over $4000 per week that Phil receives now that he's doing four-a-day . . . And last night we found out that Phil says it's an even five grand!

Friday's Funbit!

An inmate at Deer Island was looking out over the harbor the other day . . . He pointed to the City Institute steamer as she headed back to Boston . . . "There goes the fastest ship in the world," he remarked. "It takes you to a place in an hour that you are a year returning from!" . . . (If the chap who sent us this chuckle will let us know who that "peach of a gal and her hubby" are we'll mail them the two tickets we're giving him for this contribution.)

GARY COOPER IS GIVEN LEAD IN "FAREWELL TO ARMS"

Helen Hayes in Role of Nurse

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
(Copyright, 1932, by Universal Service, Inc.)

Los Angeles, June 10—That chance that Gary Cooper has so anxiously awaited is at hand. He is to play the American boy in the Italian cavalry, the outstanding male character in Ernest Hemingway's book, "Farewell to Arms."

Gary must have had a hunch that he was to play this part, for when he was in Europe he spent two weeks at the Italian cavalry school, studying their methods.

Louella O. Parsons

Helen Hayes, as we announced before, plays the nurse and this will be her first picture when she arrives home from Europe.

All the talk of "Farewell to Arms" has been, heretofore, rather hazy and indefinite. Paramount just couldn't make up its mind to film the story, which is difficult from a censorial standpoint. John Cromwell directs.

First Indian Talkie

To my knowledge Buck Jones is contributing the first talkie dealing with Indians. Time was when it was the easiest thing in the world to get Indian actors, but I am told Columbia has been hard put to find the thousand Indians necessary to film "White Eagle," Buck's next. Jim Thorpe, who used to make a pretty penny when movies were young and Indian stories were popular, plays the Indian chief.

Pittsburgh Hot Cha

That hot cha from Pittsburgh, Dick Powell, is being brought west again to be developed into another George Brent. In Pittsburgh, where he was master of ceremonies in one of the leading theaters, he had the femmes of the town standing in line. It's that appeal that induced Rufus Le Maire, Warners' casting director, who has been in New York, to bring him to the Golden West. Mr. Powell's next introduction to his movie public will be opposite Bebe Daniels in "Radio Girl," which goes into production in September.

New Ingram Find

The discoverer of Rudolph Valentino and Ramon Novarro, Rex Ingram, has a new protege in town, Gerald Fielding. He is English and the same type as Valentino and Novarro. Young Fielding acted in "Three Passions" and "Garden of Allah" for Ingram in Europe.

A Line or Two

Like murder, real estate secrets will out. Greta Garbo has leased a house in Beverly Hills for the first of November but try to find where it is. That looks as if the stoical Greta is returning. Ina Claire will have to look for another leading man when she reaches here. Kenneth MacKenna had only agreed to play opposite her in "Reunion in Vienna" if Kay Francis remained for one more picture. They both decided they need a rest more than anything, so they leave for the first vacation together Monday. They are sailing on the 24th.

HIGH SPOTS ON THE THEATERS' NEW PROGRAMS

Patsy Mason and Ida Lee are two of the talented, hand-picked beauties in "Town and Country," the new revue that opened at the Metropolitan today. They're clever singers and dancers.

Lillian Harvey and Conrad Veidt in a scene from "Congress Dances" which will be the screen feature on the new bill that opens tomorrow at the RKO Boston.

Request Night at Pops

The ballots for Request Night at the Pops have been counted, the vote being the heaviest ever known at the concerts. All tickets having been taken for Request Night next Tuesday, even before the announcement of the program, it will be repeated on Thursday, June 16. The numbers are:

Bolero, Ravel. Ouverture Solennelle, "1812," Tchaikovsky. "Rhapsody in Blue," Gershwin. Soloist, Jesus Maria Sanroma. Largo, Handel. "By the Beautiful Blue Danube," Waltz, Strauss. "Jalousie," Gypsy Tango, Gade. Overture to "William Tell," Rossini. "Liebestraum," Liszt-Herbert. Valse Triste, Sibelius. "Peer Gynt" Suite, Grieg. Two Hearts in Three-Quarter Time, Stolz. "Wintergreen for President," from "Of Thee I Sing," Gershwin. "Pomp and Circumstance," Elgar. Country Gardens, Grainger.

Lytell on New Keith Bill

Bert Lytell, heading the vaudeville bill at the New Keith's tomorrow, represents the third generation of acting Lytells. A theater trunk was his cradle, and the fiery intonations of earnest thespians in the throes of melodramas were his lullabies. In the traditional manner he made his earliest appearances in "Little Lord Fauntleroy," even as "Little Eva" in "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and as other beloved children of the drama. In stock he appeared at Worcester.

New Regent Theater

"Dance Team" and "The Deceiver," on next Monday and Tuesday, with added novelties and comedies, will be the program at the New Regent in Arlington.

Pops Tonight

March, "Second Connecticut," Reeves; overture to "Der Freischutz," Weber; Traumerei, Schumann; "La Boheme," Fantasia, Puccini; La Goyita, Langendoen; meditation from "Thais," Massenet; La Valse, Choregraphic poem, Ravel; "The Cat and the Fiddle," selection, Kern; serenade, Toselli; Strike Up the Band, Gershwin.

Clark Gable

Clark Gable, whose particular pastime is horseback riding, was presented with a pair of stirrups fashioned from studio electrical connections, welded and silver plated by the electrical crew of "Strange Interlude" at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios. The "Boys" made the gift themselves.

Thrills and Comedy on Ship

By HARRIS MORGAN

Stage and screen have been quite often "at sea"—but here's amusement literally gone afloat! Aboard that historic old craft, the famous British convict ship Success, now moored at Boston, one can get the thrills, and the chills, and the comedy along with them.

* * *

When Capt. Harry Wooten was bringing this noted water institution up to Warren Bridge, near the North Station, where she is now on public exhibition, he was swinging this oldest ship afloat and sole survivor of the once numerous fleet of British felon transports, into her 101st port in these United States. Just 20 years ago the old Success crossed the Atlantic under her own sail, making the trip in 96 days. At that time, Capt. Wooten was chief mate.

Capt. Wooten

He became commander of the ship after she docked here and since then has been in charge of her as she has proceeded from port to port in this country. The vessel has visited practically every city of any size on both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

In all, previous to entering Boston harbor this time, she had visited 100 ports. She has been as far inland as St. Louis on the Mississippi river, and Duluth on the Lakes. Among the seacoast states she has never visited are New Hampshire and Maine. It is possible that she will touch at both these states after leaving Boston, en route to the World's Fair at Chicago. The Portsmouth, N. H., Chamber of Commerce has specially requested Capt. Wooten to visit their city.

Capt. Wooten entered the United States Navy 32 years ago as an apprentice. He was trained aboard the old Monongahela, last of the sail-power training ships used in the navy.

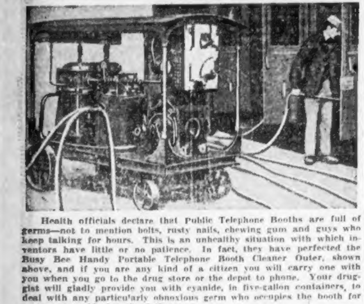
You Can't Think Clean Thoughts in a Dirty Phone Booth



Health officials declare that Public Telephone Booths are full of germs—not to mention bolts, rusty nails, chewing gum and guys who keep talking for hours. This is an unhealthy situation with which inventors have little or no patience. In fact, they have perfected the Busy Bee Handy Portable Telephone Booth Cleaner Outer, shown above, and if you are any kind of a citizen you will carry one with you when you go to the drug store or the depot to phone. Your druggist will gladly provide you with cyanide, in five-gallon containers, to deal with any particularly obnoxious germ who occupies the booth for an unreasonable length of time.

Q. AND A. DEPARTMENT

Dear Sympathetic Aunt Bella—
What is the meaning of the term "and-or?" —Anxious.

Ans.—The term is in contracts, wills, deeds and other legal documents for the purpose of designating that two or more persons, things, etc., may perform, undertake, do, or receive—or the same may apply to any one of the persons or things alone. Which is certainly a good joke on you, Mr. "Nosey."

THE VOICE OF BROADWAY

BY LOUIS SOBOL

Broadway Merry-Go-Round

All right, folks, let's go! There's lots of fun riding on this Broadway merry-go-round if you don't take yourself or what you see too seriously. Now, if you'll look over there toward the east, you'll see a sober-faced young gent walking along with a rather droopy expression, and then if you'll just switch your gaze over to the west, you'll see a pretty little gal who doesn't look any too happy either. Roger Wolfe Kahn's the name of the young gent and Hannah Williams Kahn is the gal—man and wife, but not living together, although there's talk in the air that Roger is trying to effect a reconciliation. Well, forget that but just glance at that theater—almost at your elbow here—see? That's the 44th Street Theater and young Kahn's scheduled to lead the orchestra when "Ballyhoo" premieres in this house. And looka how a colyumist's mind works. Just like a trigger. Wasn't it in this very theater that Roger wooed Hannah when she was warbling "Cheerful Little Earful" in Billy Rose's "Sweet and Low?" Sure, it was. Well, Hannah opened at the Park Central Casino last nite—and if I'm not mistaken, the very first time she ever dined at the Casino was when Roger, the ardent young suitor, took her there.

I call your attention, ladies and gentlemen, to a grand looking gal, Elsie Connors. Oh, she's danced in the choruses of famous shows and she's appeared on the floor of famous night clubs—and certainly, those of you who ride around on this carousel have seen her and distinguished her slim white body and her flashing shapely legs from the other bodies and other legs because—well, she had just that little something that makes you distinguish one person from another. Now some years ago before John D. Rockefeller, Junior, came out and reneged on his prohibition stand, she met a man and married him. He got himself enmeshed—innocently or otherwise—that's not for me to say—in bucket shop activities—and lost his battle with the law. He went to prison. Tragedy swooped down on Elsie like a black tarpaulin and threatened to smother whatever was left in life for her. She bucked up. She went back to work. She donned grease paint and powder — she smiled again, pirouetted, danced to music all out of tempo with her fluttering heart. She was young—she loved life. Her man was in prison—and she began to resent the fate that took her man from her, placed him in a cell and still demanded, if she were to adhere to the conventions, to remain loyal to him. She brooded over the unfairness of it—and finally decided that she had her own life to live. Elsie was ready to divorce her man and let him work out his own future. She chose a visiting day at the prison to break the news to him. Thin-lipped, firm, she approached him and started to blurt out her decision. He came to the room with the thick wire netting—sat opposite her—and smiled. She tried not to smile back—here was something unpleasant to get over with—and smiling or softening wouldn't help.

"What's the matter, sweet?" he asked. "Something happen?"

"Yes," she replied.

"What is it?" he asked anxiously.

"I've got something to tell you." She stopped short.

"What is it?" he asked anxiously.

"I—I—" —the words refused to cross the threshold of her lips.

He smiled again. "Let me tell you something first," he suggested gently. "Perhaps, it'll make it easier for you."

She nodded—

"I'm happy," he said. "I'm happy because you're here—it makes me feel—well, I forget everything. I love you, kid—gee, how I love you. It keeps me going—if I didn't have you, I'd give up—I'd die."

Did he suspect? I don't know. I don't know what mysterious forces direct our minds in crises. All I know is that Elsie Connors felt a load drop from her shoulders—a stone melt in her heart. For she knew then, she loved him—and would never leave him. She sobbed—and their lips met. Today, she and her man are living happily together. So, take another look at Elsie Connors, you merry-go-rounders—and don't tell me faith or romance has gone from Broadway.

I call your attention, too, to the lady whom newspapermen refer to as orchidaceous. See—immediately, unconsciously and invariably you know whom I mean. Peggy Hopkins Joyce. Four times married—or is it five?—I never was much of a hand at mathematics. A gay gal—and she tosses some lively parties. Now, no one associates unhappiness with Peggy—say, she's one of the merriest of the carousellasses—so maybe you think I'm crazy when I tell you that I watched her the other night — she was sitting with young John McClain and suddenly I perceived a very tired young woman—a sad young woman. Jewels she's got—and money, plenty—and swell clothes—and men still go a little crazy about her—but I'm telling you there isn't a more unhappy gal on all Broadway than Peggy Hopkins Joyce, the lady who thought she could beat the love game. Well, she hasn't.

Now look at that chap O. O. McIntyre. Queer sort of fellow. Goes in for fancy clothes and wears an orchid in his evening coat lapel. I haven't any idea what the chap earns, but I know he's the widest syndicated member of our fraternity and snubs vaudeville, picture and radio offers, rarely appears in a night club, never in a speakeasy—and still manages to turn out a daily column that people read and keep reading.

Well, we're slowing up—but there's still some life left in the old merry-go-round. See that little girl? That's Loretta Adams and for years Texas Guinan persisted in making her come out on the floor in men's pants because the kid looked something like Kitty Doner. So Loretta would quit every so often for a night club where they'd let her wear dresses and sing her songs. "Please," she used to appeal to me, "see if you can't convince Texas to let me wear dresses—and not those men's suits." So I carried the message to Guinan, and now Loretta sings for you—in dresses—and sings right well and is she happy. Don't you know—only a few years ago she was engaged to a fellow worth more than a million and they were to have gotten married, but he took ill—and died—before he had a chance to make a new will, which he told her he was going to—bequeathing her his fortune. He didn't leave her a thing. So she keeps on working—but she doesn't mind—now that they let her wear dresses. The merry-go-round's come to a halt. See you next week, folks.

Pupils to Present Recital and Revue

Tonight is the big night for pupils of the Dolan-DePetro Theatrical Studios, who will hold their 14th annual recital and revue at the Repertory Theater.

Gertrude Dolan DePetro

Singing and all types of dancing will feature the program arranged by Miss Gertrude Dolan DePetro, head of the theatrical school. More than 200 pupils will take part.

2 Owners Killed by Gas Well Fire

Jackson, Miss., June 10 (AP)—Officials may have to "pass the hat" to get money to quench a flaming gas well. The owners, Laurice and Wayland Attkinson, were killed yesterday when a spark from a tool set off a fiery blast.

Snuffing such a fire is an expensive process. In view of the death of the owners, officials were undecided what to do and intimated they might take up a collection.

Young Committee Should Stimulate Borrowing

The second phase of the campaign to relieve harassed business of the handicap of a credit strain has been reached.

After the Federal Reserve System has for weeks aggressively pumped out additional funds by means of purchasing Government obligations in the open market, a super board of strategy in New York, headed by Owen D. Young and eleven other leaders of finance and industry, has been organized to encourage the use of the new potential supply of loanable funds for sound business purposes.

Up to this time the practical effect of the Federal Reserve maneuver has been offset by the disposition of member banks to use the credit thus released to pay off their debts at the central regional banks. Banks in the East have gone as far as they can in this direction, and in other sections member banks are fast reducing their indebtedness.

The stronger banks are at a juncture where they must choose between piling up additional, profitless excess reserves, on the one hand, and making sound, income producing loans and investments, on the other.

Obviously, the new Young committee is designed to create an authoritative financial opinion in favor of conscious reflation, or counter-deflation, which entails an expansion of loans and investment of member banks which have shrunken drastically in the last nine months.

For a time the rate of such decline was so rapid that it became a serious aggravating cause of continuing shrinkages in trade volume and in employment.

In appointing six industrialists and six bankers to consider means of putting idle dollars to work to make jobs for idle hands, George L. Harrison, governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, evidently wanted to stop the superficial opposition by doctrinaire purists and by timid bankers against legitimate, necessary, controlled credit expansion.

This new stage setting should help to emphasize that bankers who continue in a mad race for liquidity are deserting the ship in a storm, and are accelerating the spiral of declining business.

The new body should make it clear to money lenders everywhere that they should stop the anti-social practice of further contracting the circulating medium, which consists mainly of bank credit, at a time when industry and commerce are already overliquidated.

It now becomes the patriotic duty of business enterprises enjoying a good rating to make use of such credit as they can for sound, useful, constructive job-giving purposes.

As a stimulant to private business, the Federal Government should take advantage of the approaching credit easement to float a bond issue for acceleration of public works and re-employment of the idle.

Evidence is accumulating that management in the large is at length getting ready to take the fundamental steps needed for genuine economic recovery in the United States.

Sweatshop Products
We Don't Have to Buy Them

For some reason that might not stand the light of day, the Massachusetts Legislature failed to pass the bill which would have compelled the labeling of the products of the local sweatshops which pay their women and girl employes starvation wages.

Very well. The people of Massachusetts who are the consuming public can overcome this regrettable evasion by the Legislature of its duty. They can do it by carefully selecting the materials which are produced by employers who pay their women and girls decent, living wages.

In this they can be assured of the co-operation of the retail tradesmen who have some high regard for our fine Massachusetts standards.

The Boston Evening American has stated repeatedly in these columns that worth-while manufacturers and retail tradesmen have utterly no sympathy for the sweatshops.

We find ourselves corroborated in this statement by Mr. F. A. O'Connell, who is president of the E. T. Slattery Company and of the National Retail Dry Goods Association as well.

Mr. O'Connell says, with evident accuracy, that underpaid labor has no buying power of substantial value to a community. More than that, the employes who are forced to starvation wages are less likely to become profitable consumers than they are of becoming subjects of city charity and an expensive drag upon the community. Their physical health is impaired, their moral stamina is reduced and their ability to withstand temptation is likely to be seriously diminished.

Not only the economic but the moral arguments against the starvation wages of the sweatshops are overwhelming.

New Prosit Champion

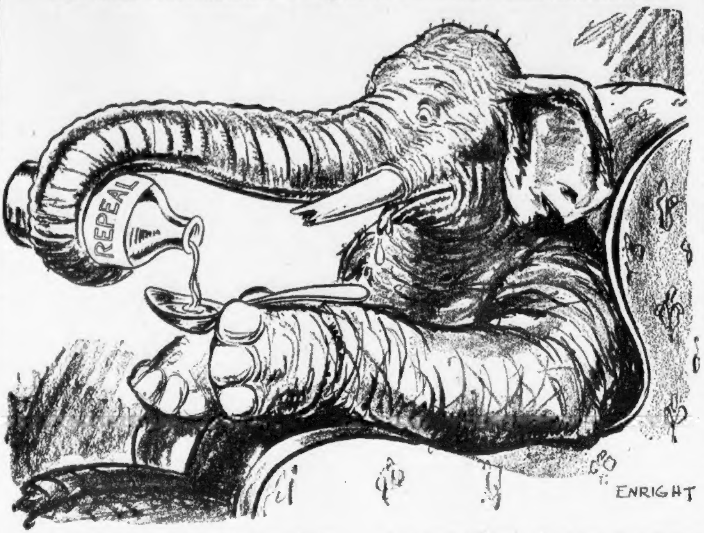
Merit does not always proclaim itself raucously in the public forum. The handsomest women are not all to be found in the movies. The north woods harbor some lumberjacks who could knock a heavyweight champion to pieces, with only half trying. Record-holders cannot meet everybody in the world, and that is why, for the moment, their title is secure.

The newest record-holder is J. Henry Cochrane, who became the world's champion beer drinker in Paris by tossing off a 2.11 quart glass in eleven seconds flat.

Anyway you look at it, it is a respectable achievement. But there are Homeric guzzlers in Bavaria and elsewhere in France who can do far better than that. Only they prefer to do their heel taps away from the drums and the fierce light of publicity.

The old burgomaster of Rothenburg swigged a gallon in one gulp. Locke's Beloved Vagabond could lay his tongue flat and empty a stoup in the twinkling of an eye. All it takes is thirst and a deft closure of the epiglottis. Compared with these notable guzzlers, Cochrane must rank somewhere along with Bishop Cannon.

An Old Gentleman Prepares to Take His Medicine



Day by day in every way it is becoming more and more apparent that the G. O. P. at Chicago must prepare to take (and to like) its REPEAL medicine.

The stirring summation of the evils of prohibition delivered by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., once ardent dry, in his letter to Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, anti-prohibitionist, gave notice to the Republican leaders that the capitalists who poured their money into the coffers of the Anti-Saloon League had deserted the prohibition movement in the interest of TRUE TEMPERANCE.

A few fanatical diehards, and, of course, the professional prohibitionists, remain in the prohibition fold. The sane, sober majority of the nation, believing in moderation, demands the removal from the Constitution of the vile Eighteenth Amendment and the relegation to the limbo of useless things of the Volstead Act.

This majority will wreak its wrath on any party and any candidate who attempt to sidestep the prohibition issue.

The Gordian Knot

Help, help!

Here is American Business, poor thing, linked as if for life to Gloom.

Why doesn't Congress take its bright and shining scimitar, called Prosperity Loan, and cut the thongs?

New York Day by Day -:- By O. O. McIntyre

Thoughts While Strolling

NEW YORK, June 10—Thoughts while strolling: Park avenue's 10 a. m. stir. The drift to beauty parlors. Style scouts. Roszika Dolly. And her new husband, "T." Netcher's brother, Irving. Flappers giving the new Cafe de la Paix a play. That glamorous wanness of the synthetically slim.

Peter B. Kyne's owl-like solemnity. One of my favorite people—Irene Castle. That lad, Glenway Westcott spreads a mean quill. Overheard: "Capital is picking at the covers." Charles B. Driscoll, a Wichita, Kan., boy, who made good in the city. A long time since Broadway has seen Willie Collier.

A lady with bright-carmined ear lobes. Believe I'll give my hair a middle part and bust out in a puff tie. Editor Keats Speed—descendant of the poet Keats. And what a dignified imprint poetry left on the venerable Edwin Markham. Lupe Velez's shadow, Bertram Taylor. Once afire for Gertrud Lawrence.

Fannie Hurst and Charles G. Norris have the same sort of haircuts. Intimates of Mayor Walker do not call him Jimmy. They call him Jim. Oh, yes, Charlie Norris and Lawrence Tibbet could swap mustaches and no one would know. The first and second Mrs. Lawrence Tibbets look alike, too.

Soft, languorous days such as these make me think of Valley Stream, L. I., for no reason at all. Lyda Roberti's pulled taffy hair. It's about time they were starring Madge Evans. She's running away with every role. Everywhere you go, you see the Frank Vance Storrs. Ubiquitous is the word.

Anyone want to join my Hiss League to razz news shots of jumping races? Where is the S. P. C. A. anyway? Jimmy Cunningham, the pro swimmer, who stands near old Rector's every dusk—wind, rain or snow. Appleton's (Wisconsin) pride—Edna Ferber. Overheard: "She has the frozen purity of an Arctic night."

Sign: "All the orange juice you can drink—10 cents. Let's fill Frank McIntyre to the brim and pass him around! Whatever became of La Belle Titcomb and her white horse? J. Harold Murray's merry twinkle. Cheap burlesque picking at the coverlets. Envoi! But the flea circus goes on forever.

Comic opera seems to brew, like Ponce de Leon's fabled spring, a fabled elixir of longevity. In an era 30 years ago the field was dominated by four male stars—Francis Wilson, DeWolf Hopper, Jefferson DeAngelis and Frank Daniels. All are alive today—in excellent shape physically and mentally and, unlike most improvident stage folk, financially. The combined ages of these four veterans must be more than 300 years. Wilson and Hopper have added cheerful notes to my dossier now and then, revealing a sprightly interest in topics of the day.

Bob Davis, indefatigable fisherman and fly caster, was recently on a piscatorial jaunt to Maine. He carries scales to jot down each catch. One day a native came running to the lake where Davis angled and gurgled excitedly of the stork's visit. He asked Davis for the loan of his private scales. Returning an hour later, he exclaimed: "Great Jehosophat! The kid weighs 52 pounds."

A standing rule on the old Herald—a pronunciamento from Bennett in Paris—that there should be a dog story on Page One every Monday. The rule was disobeyed but once when a big ship disaster crowded everything else off the page. The city editor, an honor graduate of Oxford with a pedantically pointed beard, found his dereliction the proverbial banana peel for the heel of a savant, tossing him out for the loss of a $150 a week job.

I've not been up nights over it. Not having smoked cigarettes for so long, it might be a dandy idea to knock myself off with a big black cigar.

Political Drama Home and Abroad
By Claude G. Bowers

MOST OF the recent revolutionary movements in South America have been disturbing because of the mystery of the motive and our ignorance of the characters of the revolutionists. We are not in the least worried lest the Chilean revolution, described as "socialistic," is going to result in the wreckage of organized society there. We happen to know Carlos Davila, the head of the successful revolutionary movement, who probably will become the new President. A man of medium height and polished manner, with an expression denoting intelligence plus a sense of humor, he impressed me as more conservative than radical. Suave, interesting, friendly, he has charm to a marked degree. At the time we knew him, he was the Ambassador to this country; but he was interesting to me because he was one of the foremost journalists of Chile, the directing genius of the oldest and most important paper in Santiago at a very early age. He had read intimately in American history, exploring the bypaths as well as the high roads with the curiosity of a journalist. Socially, he would fit into any drawing-room in any old world capital. In short, we liked him immensely. But had we been told four years ago that he would return to his country to organize and lead and dominate a revolution we should have thought it absurd. And that is what he has done.

He is friendly to the United States; he is not of the destructive, but of the constructive type; and there is no occasion for alarm here because of the success of his revolution.

America Well Knows German Chancellor

Another man, well-known to Americans, raised to power by something very much like a revolution in Germany, is of a different type. The new Chancellor in Germany is the military attache of the German Embassy in Washington who was given his passports and sent home without ceremony on the charge of directing the attacks on American industries engaged in the manufacture of war material that was going to the Allies exclusively, before we entered the war.

But after all, he was a subordinate when here, obeying orders from Berlin that were not always well thought out from the viewpoint of international psychology. He was for his country at any cost; and there is nothing so remarkable in that attitude.

Rainey a Democrat to the Very Last

The most interesting proceedings in this country just now, aside from the balancing of the budget by the breaking of the backs of the taxpayers, are those behind the scenes where the politicians are laboriously engaged in the framing of platforms. Speaking for one, there is something gratifying in the fact that Mr. Rainey, Democratic floor leader in the House, refused to sign the conference report on the tax bill so long as that bill out-Grundied Grundy on tariff rates. The incorporation of higher tariff rates in the tax bill, the result of the most vulgar kind of logrolling, was an outrageous and a shameless thing. More privilege, at a time when this country is prostrate because of a policy of privilege inspired by greed pursued through many years, is a mockery. We are glad that Mr. Rainey stood out and fought it to the last, and refused to put the name of a Democratic leader to a measure which proclaims that the Grundy rates were not high enough. I like his last sentence:

> "I may not be the last Democrat, but I am a Democrat to the last."

Short Platforms Are Demanded

The Democratic platform will be definitely determined by the Convention. But leaders in both parties are now engaged in the preparation of platforms that will be urged on the Resolutions Committee. Senator Cordell Hull is now at work with others in the preparation of tentative drafts. We are not afraid of his position on Grundyism. If the Democrats in Convention compromise with Grundyism and throw that issue away, it will compromise its chance of victory, aside from making itself the laughing stock of the country.

The only real problem of the Republican Convention will be that of prohibition, and James R. Garfield is said to be directing the movement to find the phrases sufficiently deceptive to satisfy both the wets and the drys.

Any declaration that will accomplish that feat will be worthy of a Tallyrand—and of the damnation of all honest men. There can be no blowing hot and cold on that.

Never have platforms been more important than this year. They can, and should, be made short, sharp, unequivocable, and they must touch on every vital subject. The longer they are the more evident it will be that they are framed for the purposes of dissimulation.

Just Folks

The Practical Side

She looked at him and smiled, and he Forgot about his poverty.

But, oh, her face was wondrous fair!

While arm in arm they walked along,
In all this world was nothing wrong.

Day after day upon the street
At 2 o'clock they planned to meet.

And in their dreams of love were lost
All sordid thoughts of cash and cost.

In such exquisite hours and nice,
Who'd think of bills for meat and ice,

And spoil the glory of the day
By mentioning rent they'd have to pay?

He popped the question! She replied
By promising to be his bride.

Now back to where he was before,
He's thinking sordid thoughts once more.

In wondering just what carpets cost.
